President Obama visits wounded warriors at Ramstein

by Staff Sgt. Sara Keller
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Air Force One touched down March 29 at Ramstein bringing President Barack Obama, who came to meet with some of America's heroes.

After a week of traveling through Europe and stopping in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, the president made a short trip to Germany to meet with wounded warriors from the Landstuhl Regional Medical Center here.

"(Meeting the president) was such a surreal experience," said Sgt. 1st Class Shederis Lakin, wounded warrior from the 840th Transportation Battalion, 595th Transportation Brigade. "It's not every day a service member gets to meet the commander in chief. I feel honored to have gotten the opportunity."

Scholarship recipient gives back to Air Force

by Senior Airman Hailey Haux

There are a number of scholarships available for military dependents who want to attend college, and many are just an essay away.

One scholarship recipient found a way to give back to the community who awarded her the chance of a lifetime.

Sara Pavich, 86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs intern, received a scholarship from the Ramstein Officers' Spouses Association in 2010.

"In order to apply for the scholarship, I had to send in my transcripts, test scores and write a short essay," Pavich said. "I was very excited when I found out I got the scholarship. Every little bit helps, especially with books and tuition."

Receiving a scholarship is an honor and a blessing to those who were selected.

"I am very proud that she was selected. She was very worthy," said Col. Todd Pavich, Headquarters, U.S. Air Forces in Europe global force management operations and

COMMENTARY

Wounded warriors relieve stress with K-9 compassion

by Master Sgt. Amanda Callahan
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

For anyone who knows me, it's no surprise I love animals. Specifically, I love dogs, and even more specifically, I love my dogs as though they are my children. I have no intention of ever having a human child, so my three- and four-legged children are my pride and joy.

I also love giving back to our community. It sounds cheesy, but it's true. Anytime I can combine my two loves, I jump on it. At my last duty station, I volunteered as a bather at a mill-dog rescue. When we arrived and I learned the opportunities at animal shelters and rescues were significantly less abundant, I was at a loss.

Then, I saw it — "Pets and Warriors."

"What is this?" I asked myself. I quickly found out through the Red Cross office at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center this program is a way for me and other pet owners to provide a bit of home to wounded warriors and family members by bringing our fur-kids through the hospital.

Eighteen obedience classes, Canine Good Citizenship certification, a thorough veterinary exam and background check (for humans) later, and my husband and I celebrated Spanky's first day on the job as a morale pet for the Red Cross.

Spanky took his job seriously. He was petted, kissed and loved by staff members, patients and visiting family members and friends. He went room to room, human escorts in tow, laying on beds, in laps. Anywhere there was a free hand to pet him, he went to fulfill that hand's need.

As the then 7-year-old Boston terrier pranced through the halls at LRMC showing off his brand new little Red Cross volunteer scarf, it hit me. I'm not just giving back to my fellow service members and their families. They're giving back to me, too.

We've done a number of visits since that first day, and every time he parades down the halls, I'm reminded of just how important it is for someone to have unconditional love to help them through hard times.

For the LRMC staff, Spanky and the other pets offer a small break from what could be a really hard day; maybe they've had a difficult patient, maybe they're feeling helpless at providing comfort to someone in pain. The list of difficulties goes on, but when the team of Red Cross volunteers (two- and four-legged) comes through the door, it gives them just a minute to forget the troubles they may be going through and just laugh and bask in the joy of dog licks and cat purrs.

Then, there are the patients. We've listened to stories of their own pets and how much they miss them. We've heard about how many of their friends have or had Bostons and how those big ears brought so much chaos and personality to their lives. We've talked to them on Christmas and heard about what their families are doing at home before they visit the hospital, and we've talked to them about what they would've done on New Year's if they hadn't been in the hospital.

So often, there's an air of loneliness when you enter a patient's room. There are times we're the first ones to come in who aren't there to check vitals, insert an IV or offer some form of painful physical therapy. Those are the necessary evils of rehabilitation, and the staff at LRMC are some of the finest medical professionals around, but at times, even their efforts to comfort just can't stand up to the unspoken consolation provided by a wagging tail (or stub, in Spanky's case) and big dog eyes.

Unfortunately, we can't go as often as we'd like. The full schedules of two senior NCOs, TDYs and unforeseen scheduling conflicts cause us to only have the ability to go a few times a month. I look forward to every visit as if it's the first, though. For my husband and me, sharing some of Spanky's personality is as therapeutic for us as it is for the patients.

For Spanky, though I don't speak dog, the evidence of his happiness is apparent through his actions. He excitedly hops on laps, calmly lays next to patients, and sits with kids, smiling his big Boston smile, sporting his small crimson neck piece.

Though we can't share him as often as we'd like, other PaWS volunteers are active program participants. Toby, a high-fiving Yorkie, for example, is well-known among long-term patients and staff members. His human, Cindy, escorts him through the different wards regularly. Bubba, a very handsome miniature poodle, and Jack, a teacup poodle, are also program veterans, willing to step in anywhere a human needs to pet away their bad day. We've got large breeds, small breeds and even cats.

That's not to say program coordinators aren't always looking for more bundles of furry joy to share in the experience. If your pet has the right temperament and is looking for a "job" with the Red Cross, contact the American Red Cross PaWS chairwoman, Leah McCracken, at leah.mccracken@redcross.org.

"Such short little lives our pets have to spend with us, and they spend most of it waiting for us to come home each day. It is amazing how much love and laughter they bring into our lives and even how much closer we become with each other because of them." - John Grogan, "Marley and Me: Life and Love with the World's Worst Dog."

ly loaded 240,000 pounds of fuel in 33 minutes, making it a record for the fastest time to refuel Air Force One, Obama greeted and spoke with Gen. Frank Gorenc, U.S. Air Forces in Europe and Air Forces Africa commander, and Brig. Gen. Patrick X. Mordente, 86th Airlift Wing commander.

"Supporting the president is a no-fail mission," Mordente said. "I am extremely proud of the 86th AW and Team Ramstein for providing outstanding support for the commander in chief and making this mission a success."

Although the visit was a surprise for the wounded warriors, being able to sit down in such an intimate setting with the president was one experience they said they would never forget.

"It meant so much to me that he took time out to visit with just the wounded warriors," Lakin said. "I was expecting to just listen to him speak in a huge room with a hundred people, but he sat down with us and talked to us one-on-one. He even asked us to say hello to our families back home. I'll never forget that."

Obama departed Ramstein March 29 to return home to the White House in Washington, D.C.

CSAF: Budget cuts affect combatant commands

Secretary of the Air Force Deborah Lee James and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Mark A. Welsh III testify on the Air Force posture for fiscal year 2015 before the House Appropriations subcommittee on defense March 26 in Washington, D.C.

WASHINGTON — Painful budget reductions will reduce the future capabilities of combatant commanders, Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Mark A. Welsh III told Congress here March 26.

Testifying alongside Secretary of the Air Force Deborah Lee James at a hearing of the House Appropriations Committee's defense subcommittee, Welsh discussed the difficult decisions budget constraints have presented and will continue to present to the Air Force's role in defending national security.

"Every major decision reflected in this budget proposal hurts," he said. "Each of them reduces the capabilities our combatant commanders would love to have and believe they need. Your Air Force is the finest in the world, and we need to keep it that way. We built this budget to ensure that Air Force combat power remains unequaled, but that does not mean it will remain unaffected."

There are no more easy cuts, the general said.

"We simply can't ignore the fact that the law is currently written (to return) us to sequestered funding levels in (fiscal year 2016)," Welsh said. "So that's also considered as part of our plan. To prepare for that, we must cut people and force structure now to create a balanced Air Force that we can afford to train and operate in (fiscal 2016) and beyond."

Because the Air Force needed to cut billions rather than millions of dollars out of its budget, "the normal trimming around the edges just wasn't going to get it done," Welsh said.

"So we looked at cutting fleets of aircraft as a way to get to the significant savings that are required," he added.

Welsh explained the logic of the "very tough decisions" that had to be made.

"In our air superiority mission area, we already have reductions in our proposal," he said. "But eliminating an entire fleet would leave us unable to provide air superiority for an entire theater of operations. We are the only service that can do so."

Intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance constitute the No. 1 shortfall of the combatant commanders year after year, Welsh noted. "They would never support even more cuts than we already have in our budget proposal," he said.

Noting the Air Force has "several aircraft" in the global mobility mission area, Welsh said he spoke with Army Chief of Staff Gen. Ray Odierno during budget planning to get his thoughts on reducing the airlift fleet.

"His view was that a smaller Army would need to be more responsive and able to move quicker," Welsh said. "He did not think that reducing airlift assets further was a good idea, and the (Air Force) secretary and I agree. We looked at our air refueling fleets and considered divesting the KC-10 as an option. Just one example, but the analysis showed us that the mission impact was too significant."

readiness division chief. "There are resources available for people to do what they want, and they can get those resources by showing passion and skills. (Scholarships) are good things for people to give and receive."

Sara decided to obtain a degree in media arts and design with a concentration in print journalism, using the money to go to James Madison University in Virginia.

"I loved the program there," she said. "The professors were really knowledgeable and passionate about helping their students make a career. Many people said getting a degree in journalism was a waste of time, but I couldn't imagine studying anything else."

The scholarship given to Sara provided her the chance to give back to the community by becoming an intern at Ramstein.

"I had a great opportunity with my dad being stationed here to come and intern," Sara said. "Being able to live in Europe and gain work experience no one else will get is priceless. I am very proud that I can serve my country in my own way, by giving back to the community that helped me with my education."

Sara's internship here has been an invaluable one as she continues to grow as part of the team.

"Sara has been a wonderful contributor to the 86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs mission," said Maj. Tony Wickman, 86th AW chief of public affairs. "She jumped in feet-first, stepped up to every challenge we have given her and became a valuable asset to tell our story. She has a wonderful attitude and demeanor, and we couldn't ask for a better volunteer intern."

Sara graduates in spring and plans to move to California where she will continue her endeavors as a journalist. Her dream is to work at a lifestyle magazine company in Denver.

Closures

• The Pulaski VAT Office will be closed today in support of the Spring Bazaar on Rhine Ordnance Barracks. VAT offices on Landstuhl and Kleber will remain open.

• The Ramstein and Kleber U.S. Army Garrison Rheinland-Pfalz passport offices are scheduled to close Tuesday and Wednesday for training. Both offices will resume normal operating hours Thursday.

• The KMC Housing offices will close at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday for training and April 25 for an office function. Offices will be closed April 18 and 21 for German legal holidays.

• Effective April 15, Ramstein Housing Satellite Office will close its doors and no longer provide housing services. All housing needs will be handled at the main housing office located on Vogelweh, Bldg. 1001.

Blood drive

The 106th Financial Management Support Unit hosts a blood drive from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Kleber Fitness Center, Bldg. 3235.

AFAF Sports Day

The Air Force Assistance Fund program coordinators will hold a sports day April 11 at the Ramstein Southside Fitness Center. There will be prizes, food and drinks. The first event, "Bike to Work," will kick off at 6:45 a.m. Eight other events will be held throughout the day, including three-on-three basketball, dodgeball, kick ball and ultimate flying disk. All donations will be evenly distributed among the four AFAF affiliates. For more information on the different events, contact your unit AFAF representative.

AFA scholarship

The Air Force Association has renamed its spouse scholarship, The Mike and Gail Donley Spouse Scholarship, as a lasting tribute to the former secretary of the Air Force and his wife. The scholarship is designed to encourage Air Force spouses worldwide to pursue associate, bachelor or graduate/postgraduate degrees. The AFA would like to award one scholarship to each of the Air Force Major Commands and possibly to spouses of Airmen who are not currently assigned to a MAJCOM depending on the quality and number of applications received. Recipients of this scholarship will be awarded $2,500, which may be used for any reasonable cost related to pursuing a degree, including tuition, books, transportation or child care costs. Applications can be found on the AFA website at www.afa.org/SpouseScholarship. Complete packages are due to Lynette Cross, lcross@afa.org, no later than April 30.

New library hours

Starting Tuesday, libraries will have new opening hours. The Ramstein Library will be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday to Thursday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday to Sunday. AIRPS Airmen deliver goods

Airman 1st Class Holly Mansfield
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Staff Sgt. James Whyte, 86th Communications Squadron customer service NCOIC, files paperwork at the customer service desk March 27 on Ramstein. The 78 members of the Northside Post Office ensure packages and other mail leave and arrive at Ramstein promptly by using quality service, pride in their work and motivation.

While being stationed overseas, delivering packages to stateside or deployed loved ones might sound like a pain to some. Volunteers from different career fields around the Air Force and career postal Airmen of the 2nd Air Postal Squadron send packages from KMC residents on a journey to destinations around the world.

With packages being shipped everywhere, including to mothers back home and spouses downrange, having trust in the people shipping them is a must.

"From the training we received, Airmen are fully capable of getting the job done," said Tech. Sgt. David Lott, 86th Communications Squadron official mail manager. "I have full trust in all of our Airmen (that they will) do the best they can to take care of the mail."

Thousands of miles away, a package will be opened by its recipient, but before it gets there it must be prepared to ship out. In order to prepare the packages, volunteers from around the Air Force and a hand full of career postal Airmen work constantly to make sure the local post office is ready for use.

"I volunteered for postal to have a change of scenery and got Ramstein," said Senior Airman Mannon Wills, 86th CS postal finance clerk. "This is the biggest and busiest post office in the (Department of Defense). We ship about 36,000 packages a year. We provide postal service for members of the KMC as well as people coming from different bases in Germany and around Europe."

While working in a post office that covers such a large community in a foreign country, a postal Airman might feel overwhelmed, however, Airmen at the Ramstein Northside Post Office keep their motivation high by having honor in their job.

"It takes a lot of motivation from NCOs and younger Airmen to come and work here every day because we are the biggest post office in Europe," Lott said. "We have to take pride in everything we do."

While having pride in their jobs, the Airmen of the Northside Post Office accomplish their mission by doing the simplest job they could ever do: getting along with each other. Camaraderie between the Airmen who come from different career fields to volunteer for postal work and the few career postal Airmen helps the mission run smoothly.

"We have around 78 people working at the Northside Post Office," Lott said. "One of the good things with the post office here is the arrangement of folks we have, because you'll get people from all (Air Force Specialty Codes). They bring in a lot of good things from other parts of the Air Force."

Even the happiest face possible can be broken by a customer having a bad day. Being the last in a long line of organizations that handle the shipping of packages, an Airman must be prepared to hand over a box that has been damaged during its journey to Ramstein.

"Between the post offices back home, to the airlines that ship the mail, to the contractors and carriers, there are a lot of hands involved in getting people's mail here," Lott said. "Sometimes the mail gets beat up before it comes to us. If this happens, we tell the customer that it's OK and that we'll take care of it."

Quality postal service in the KMC comes from the hard working, dedicated and motivated Airmen of the Northside Post Office. Ensuring a package starts or ends its journey with pride and precision is one of their top priorities.

Patriot Garden back in bloom

A rich medley of tomato, fresh garlic and parmesan cheese fills the air as Soldiers and civilians from the Patriot Garden dining facility move through the kitchen with clock-work precision. The team is busy chopping, stirring and sauteing all of the ingredients for the day's lunch meal.

A cook brings dining facility manager Sgt. 1st Class Kevin Hopkins a bowl of marinara sauce to taste. The New York native samples a spoonful.

"The flavors and spices should complement each other. You want a nice even blend," Hopkins said. "This is what the customer is going to taste, and it has to be right."

Hopkins took over the Patriot Garden late last year, and when he arrived he found a facility that was operating over budget, losing customers and facing a shortage of cooks due to deployments.

Chief Warrant Officer 2 William Michitsch, food service adviser for the 10th Army Air and Missile Defense Command, said Hopkins came in and hit the ground running.

"I've been here for over two and a half years and I've been through several dining facility managers, and … we've had a not so great of a past," Michitsch said. "Sergeant Hopkins jumps in right into the rhythm and makes immediate changes. He and his staff are doing great things, and I'm proud to have him here."

Hopkins helped to bring in contracted cooks, added new menu items, including a potato, sandwich and ice cream bar, hosted theme meals and worked to shift the facility's finances back into the black.

Hopkins also got back to the basics.

"We're customer driven here," he said. "We use the feedback we receive, and I grab the NCOs and we sit down and brainstorm together to see what types of meals actually draw in the headcount and what we can do better from the last time. We also attend the dining facility council meetings. It's a team effort all around."

Shift leader Sgt. Herman Smith is one of those NCOs.

"This dining facility is on an up rise. We have new leadership. We have new everything, and starting with that leadership means a lot of changes and changes are good," Smith said. "We've improved our head count and our actual crowd of diners. More Soldiers are starting to come in and they're starting to enjoy the food more. We look forward to coming in and cooking everyday because of that. It makes us feel good inside knowing that they love our food."

The Patriot Garden Dining Facility, located in Bldg. 163, serves breakfast from 7:30 to 9 a.m., lunch from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., and dinner from 4:30 to 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. On weekends, brunch is served from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and dinner from 4:30 to 6 p.m.

"Come through our doors and at least experience what we have to offer," Hopkins said. "We want to be the customer's No. 1 choice when it comes to dining facilities."

721st AMXS Airmen maintain mission readiness

Senior Airman James Mabry, 721st Aircraft Maintenance Squadron crew chief, checks different parts of a C-17 Globemaster III during a pre-flight inspection March 12 on Ramstein. Members of the 721st AMXS perform inspections of aircraft to ensure all parts are mission ready before and after flights.

Pulling chocks, turning wrenches and marshaling aircraft. These are three things the Airmen of the 721st Aircraft Maintenance Squadron cover during an average shift, 365 days a year at Ramstein.

Helping conduct missions affecting military members downrange, the 721st AMXS keeps the aircraft mission ready.

"We do aeromedical missions a lot and get to see wounded warriors come through from being deployed," said Senior Airman Justin Kent, 721st AMXS hydraulic system journeyman.

Ramstein gives its 721st AMXS Airmen a unique opportunity to see the different parts of the mission they might not see at other bases.

"I have been here for nine months," Kent said. "I worked back shop at my last base, so I didn't get to see the impact of my job, because I was building breaks and actuators. Here I get to see the mission, and it just makes it a lot more rewarding. We do a lot of missions, and it feels good to be here at this base in this squadron, because I actually get to see the impact of my job. It's an awesome feeling."

Seeing the impact of the completed job can bring an extra sense of reward to a member doing the work. At the 721st AMXS, newer Airmen are able to complete a task they might not have been able to do as a commercial aircraft mechanic.

"I love my job. I get to see a lot of awesome things," said Kent. "I'm a hydraulics technician, so I get to do a lot of maintenance work on the aircraft. I get to fix the aircraft, flight control systems, brake systems and landing systems. It's a really awesome job, and I couldn't see myself doing anything else."

Airmen and civilians in the squadron need to be able to depend on each other to get the job done. Taking the time to make sure everything is correct could be the difference between life and death for aircraft crew members and their passengers.

"Our Airmen out on the flightline are very good at checking for all the details," said Senior Master Sgt. Jack C. Johns III, 721st AMXS Maintenance superintendent. "I know I can trust them to get the job done effectively. I'm going to work for the wing in the next couple of weeks, however, in the past 2.5 years it has been an honor to serve with the professional, hardworking Airmen in this squadron."

For supervisors, knowing Airmen are doing their jobs safely and effectively can put them at ease. On the flip side, the Airmen need leaders that help them improve their craft. The young Airmen in the 721st AMXS have the opportunity to have their senior NCOs and NCOs out working with them.

"The NCOs and senior NCOs make the job completely easy, because they manage it and get everything prepared," Kent said. "We know what we have to do to get the mission done correctly."

Members of the 721st AMXS took their camaraderie to the next level when they were able to ship out one of their own when he was in need.

"We did a mission for one of our guys with cancer," Kent said. "He had to be sent back to the states, and we got to launch him out and see him off. It was a really fulfilling mission."

Using skill, passion for the job and togetherness, members of the 721st AMXS are able to get aircraft in and out of Ramstein to accomplish the mission.

Wounded Heroes Service Center surpasses one-year mark

by Brandon Beach
21st Theater Sustainment Command Public Affairs

The Wounded Heroes Service Center on Kleber Kaserne opened its doors one year ago, and since that time, it has helped more than 1,700 wounded Soldiers from Landstuhl Regional Medical Center obtain new and replacement uniform items.

Located in the Army and Air Force Exchange Service's Military Clothing Store, the center is the result of a five-month construction project that began in August 2012. Initiated by the 21st Theater Sustainment Command and funded by U.S. Army Garrison Rheinland-Pfalz, the project entailed renovating the 720-square-foot warehouse facility by adding new wheelchair accessible ramps, automatic doors, dressing rooms, handicap-accessible bathrooms and additional registers.

"This was a $250,000 project, so we had to have command approval to get this done," said Deniz Barcala, manager of the Kaiserslautern Military Clothing Store. "The 21st TSC is the reason this happened."

With the WHSC operating apart from the main store, wounded Soldiers now have the privacy they need when visiting Kleber Kaserne for their military clothing needs. Barcala said wounded Soldiers who are medically evacuated from a combat zone to Landstuhl arrive with often only the clothes on their backs.

"When they are wounded, they don't have time to pack their bags. Everything is left behind," she said. "We make sure they get two sets of ACUs (Army Combat Uniform), full PT (physical training) gear, long sleeve and short sleeve shirts, pants, jacket, boots, socks, undershirts and underwear."

Since the WHSC opened on Jan. 16, 2013, Barcala and her staff have issued more than $700,000 worth of military clothing, and wounded Soldiers don't have to pay a penny.

"The Army covers this," Barcala said. "From AAFES, we also give them a $250 gift certificate to purchase regular, everyday clothes."

Robert Young has been a warehouse worker at Kleber MCS since June of last year. He and his fellow AAFES co-workers never hesitate to stop what they are doing to assist a group of wounded Soldiers arriving by shuttle bus at the store.

"Everyone drops what they are doing," said the Columbus, Ga., native. "We immediately meet the Soldiers in the (WHSC). We get their paperwork, they get a shopping cart and we start pulling their sizes. We make sure their boots fit properly. If they want to try things on, we have two dressing rooms."

Young, a former member of the U.S. Army himself, added, "I used to be on the other end, so I know what it feels like to be appreciated by civilians and other military personnel."

For their efforts in assisting wounded Soldiers over the past years, Barcala and her staff received a certificate of appreciation in January from the Landstuhl Medical Transient Detachment. The WHSC on Kleber is the only facility of its kind in all of AAFES worldwide stores.

"We feel privileged to give something back to the Soldiers," Barcala said. "They are doing so much for us."

721st APS keeps FOD off flightline

Foreign object damage is any substance, debris or article alien to a vehicle or system that can cause significant damage. The 721st Aerial Port Squadron preforms FOD prevention sweeps three times a week to prevent this from happening to aircraft engines during takeoff or landing. In fiscal year 2013, Ramstein reported more than $4.8 million in damages due to aircraft FOD. To help prevent FOD, clean-up is conducted after any work or maintenance on or near the flightline. For the Airmen who make the effort to ensure the area is carefully scouted for FOD, a golden bolt is hidden on the flightline for the Airman to find with the finder receiving a reward.

Frank Otero, 721st Aerial Port Squadron Special handling section hazmat inspector, finds the hidden golden bolt.

Canadian Casualty Support Team ends LRMC mission

Chuck Roberts
Landstuhl Regional Medical Center Public Affairs

A Canadian chaplain speaks with a patient being unloaded from an ambulance bus in 2009 at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center. A closing ceremony for the Canadian Armed Forces Casualty Support Team at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center was held in March. The ceremony coincided with the ending of Canada's military mission in Afghanistan where its commitment to the war in Afghanistan included fatalities and injuries. The Casualty Support Team served the almost 400 Canadian wounded warriors treated at LRMC.

When wounded warriors from the U.S. are lowered from the ambulance bus to a team of military providers at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center, seeing a familiar unit patch worn by liaison officers from their command is always a welcomed sight.

It's been the same for Canadian soldiers seeing the Red Maple Leaf worn by members of the Canadian Armed Forces Casualty Support Team who served at LRMC from 2006 until its closing ceremony March 20. The ceremony coincided with the ending of Canada's military mission in Afghanistan. The Casualty Support Team served the almost 400 Canadian wounded warriors treated at LRMC.

"Myself, as well as all of the liaison nurses that have preceded me, have been very honored to work with such a high caliber of physicians, nurses and support personnel," said 1st Lt. Kelsey E.N. Penner, aeromedical evacuation nursing liaison officer at the ceremony. "We have always received the highest quality of support and have been treated as an integral part of the liaison team at LRMC. We are greatly appreciative of all of the support that we have received here, as well as from organizations such as the 86th Contingency Aeromedical Staging Facility at Ramstein. In addition, the families of those with significant injuries were hosted at the LRMC Fisher House and received tremendous support from the clinical and pastoral staff. Without the outstanding support of LRMC command, medical, and support staff, the Canadian mission in Afghanistan would not have been possible."

LRMC Commander Col. Judith Lee paid tribute to the important role the Casualty Support Team played in being there for their fellow Canadians.

"There is no greater sight when you're a casualty than to see someone in your own uniform," Lee said.

Lee joked saying she hoped she wouldn't be seeing another CST at LRMC again in the near future, but if future hostilities did require the team here again, she knew the transition would be an easy one.

At its peak, the Casualty Support Team consisted of eight multidisciplinary members, consisting of a commanding officer, nurses (including specialists in aeromedical evacuation), medical technician, chaplain, administrative officer and clerk, and a technician specializing in IT systems.

The team was responsible for liaison with U.S. medical personnel, facilitation of evacuation back to Canada or back to the combat theatre, and personalized, individual support to casualties and their families while at LRMC.

This was particularly important during the deployment of personnel from French-speaking areas of Canada.

Canadians were one of 55 coalition forces treated at LRMC, and the Maple Leaf became a common sight worn on the distinctive green uniforms worn by Canadian staff, as well as the Canadian flags displayed outside patient rooms of the fellow Soldiers they served.

Canada's role in the Afghanistan war began in late 2001 after the September attacks on the U.S. In February 2002, the first contingents of regular troops were deployed, and Operation APOLLO was established.

In March 2002, snipers from the 3rd Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry fought alongside U.S. Army units as part of Operation ANACONDA, and Canadian troops provided garrison and security support throughout Afghanistan. The Canadian commitment was originally planned to last until October 2003; however, in August 2003, Canadian troops moved to the northern city of Kabul to become the commanding nation of the newly formed International Security Assistance Force.

As hostile operations increased, Canada began to take increased casualties in Afghanistan. A sustainable patient evacuation plan was required, and the U.S. government signed an agreement to provide Aeromedical Evacuation to LRMC. Canadian patients were transported by the U.S. Air Force to LRMC where they received definitive surgical care while awaiting aeromedical evacuation back to Canada through the Canadian Aeromedical Evacuation System.

It was quickly determined that a patient liaison element would be required at LRMC, and medical and nursing staff from the Canadian Forces medical unit located in Geilenkirchen, Germany, were assigned the task. As casualties continued to increase, however, it was quickly determined that this arrangement was not sustainable, and in February 2006 the first Canadian Aeromedical Evacuation Nursing Liaison Officer (AENLO) was deployed to Landstuhl.

In 2006, the Taliban conducted a major offensive in the Kandahar and Helmand provinces, and by the end of the year 36 Canadian Soldiers lost their lives as a result of operations, and 96 Canadian casualties were treated at LRMC. The year 2007 saw a similar number of casualties, and the AENLO and small medical team from Geilenkirchen became overwhelmed. In February 2008, Canadian Expeditionary Force Command deployed the first Casualty Support Team to LRMC with plans to rotate in new personnel every six months.

The team worked out of transient office space at LRMC and nearby Ramstein Air Base. In the spring of 2008, an office trailer was installed by the Canadian government on a space provided by LRMC facilities. The liaison nurses were granted access to U.S. clinical systems instrumental in providing medical reports back to Canada. Additionally, this allowed the nurses to print electronic health records and scan them into Canadian systems. A Canadian Medical Technician was embedded with the 86th Contingency Aeromedical Staging Facility at Ramstein Air Base, and this unit provided outstanding support to outbound Canadian AE missions.

As Canada began withdrawing from Kandahar in 2011, the Casualty Support Team at LRMC was downsized to reflect a decrease in Canadian casualties. In the meantime, CST personnel increased their contribution to LRMC operations, volunteering their time in clinical areas, with the American Red Cross, LRMC Trauma Program, Fisher House, Wounded Warrior Project, and the 86th CASF, all in the hopes of "giving back" to the community for their tremendous support.

The Canadian flag in Kabul was lowered on March 12 and the final Canadian Armed Forces personnel were withdrawn. Although there will no longer be full-time personnel deployed to LRMC, Canada will maintain a presence. The physical infrastructure of the office trailer will be maintained by personnel from the Canadian Operational Support Hub (Europe) located in Cologne, Germany, and medical liaison responsibility will return to the clinic in Geilenkirchen. This arrangement will allow Canada to continue to provide support to patients from various operations throughout the world. The Casualty Support Team will transition to "Caretaker Status" and is able to be reactivated on short notice in response to another large scale operation such as Afghanistan.

Staying fit Bokwa style

The 86th Force Support Squadron invited Bokwa creator and co-CEO Paul Mavi to instruct fitness classes March 20 on Ramstein.

Similar to Zumba, Bokwa is a cardio-based group exercise program where participants draw numbers and letters with their feet. Since participants use numbers and letters as steps, there isn't a need to count steps, unlike most workouts.

The high intensity workout provides an effective and fun option for Airmen to remain physically fit. Mavi, a native of South Africa, founded Bokwa in Los Angeles in 2000 and has taught instructors from 45 countries who teach classes in their local areas.

Salsa dancing breaks down communication barriers

by Rick Scavetta
U.S. Army Garrison Rheinland-Pfalz

Soldiers and spouses from the 66th Transportation Company learn salsa dancing as part of a program to open up communication.

Hips swayed as 66th Transportation Company Soldiers shed their tops and shuffled across the floor in tan combat boots. Confused looks and shaking heads were replaced by smiles and laughter as inhibitions were lost to salsa rhythms.

The Soldiers were taking part in a new U.S. Army Garrison Rheinland-Pfalz resiliency program focused on the arts, offered at the Kaiserslautern Community Activities Center on Daenner Kaserne.

Company leaders recently found poor communication affecting unit cohesion – something they sought to change, said Capt. John T. Huckabay, 66th Transportation Company.

"Getting out and doing something like salsa dancing can break down barriers. Afterward, we can sit and talk about some issues, as couples and with the unit," Huckabay said. "This is thinking outside the box and doing something different to bring all the leaders together."

Last summer, when the company returned from Afghanistan, bonds stemming from the deployment were strong. But the company underwent a large personnel turnover. There were new Soldiers, new leaders and that affected unit cohesion.

"We're trying to get our communication network opened up," said Kathleen McMahan, the company's family readiness group leader. "We've invited the senior leadership, and our first step is to couple communication therapy through music and dance."

The FRG began working with a military family life counselor, a contracted specialist from the garrison's Army Community Service program. That led to Ed Codina, director of the Kaiserslautern Arts & Crafts Center, who offered resiliency through the arts before, suggesting he teach salsa dancing to the Soldiers.

Dancing forces couples to overcome inhibitions and address their vulnerability. The main thing is breaking the ice, overcoming shyness, Codina said.

"In marriages, the biggest problem is when there is no communication. They are not talking to each other," Codina said. "This gets them to touch, to glorify each other on the floor and to follow each other."

One officer took salsa lessons in college. Most had never done it before, they said. By stepping outside their comfort zone and onto a dance floor, Soldiers can open communication lines with their spouses and fellow Soldiers. That may have a larger impact on the company, McMahan said.

"Hopefully, this starts some networking and bonding and brings the unit together," McMahan said. "It's awesome that the garrison has this."

Codina would like to see the program expand and made available to more Soldiers, civilians and their families. For more information, call 483-6508 or 0631- 411-6508.

7th CSC takes part in Saber Guardian 14

Service members from the 7th Civil Support Command's Joint Task Force-Consequence Management participate in a tug-of-war competition during exercise Saber Guardian 14's cultural day March 28.

NOVO SELO, Bulgaria — Soldiers with the 7th Civil Support Command, 21st Theater Sustainment Command, along with service members and civilians from various other units throughout the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps, participated in a cultural day with soldiers from 11 partner nations prior to the official start of exercise Saber Guardian 14 March 28.

Saber Guardian 14 is an exercise intended to test the capabilities of partner nations in assisting one another, as requested, in disasters or potential world-wide emergencies.

Saber Guardian's cultural day was a way for service members and civilians participating from all 12 nations to get to know their partners better by participating in a traditional Bulgarian crafts and souvenirs market, eating traditional Bulgarian cuisine, taking a sightseeing trip to the local community, and participating in various sports activities such as races, tug-of-war and arm wrestling competitions.

Events such as the cultural day give participating nations "an opportunity to learn more about us," said Col. Paul Rosewitz, operations officer in charge of the 7th CSC and the exercise's Joint Task Force-Consequence Management. "Everyone comes to an event like this with preconceived ideas and notions and this gives us all an opportunity to learn that we're all people and we all have similar interests. It allows us to work through any cultural barriers and gain a better understanding how others do things."

"It helps integrate the cultures between the participating nations," said Sgt. Maj. Edward Knight, operations sergeant major for the 7th CSC and the JTF-CM. "It also helps to boost esprit de corps across the ranks."

Participating service members and civilians had the opportunity to compete both with and against their partners in a variety

ZAVENTEM, Belgium — As local radio announcers provided hourly updates on President Barack Obama's visit to Belgium March 26, Soldiers from the 7th Civil Support Command's 773rd Civil Support Team trained for possible future international crises.

The 773rd CST Soldiers partnered with the Zaventem Fire Department during the fifth annual Chemical, Biological, Radiological and Nuclear training exercise, known as CBRN Week, March 24 to 28.

During five days of joint training, more than 17 773rd CST Soldiers and approximately a dozen local firefighters tested their joint CBRN response techniques in a variety of scenarios.

"My intention was to put different scenarios together to test training with different departments to work together and manage a HAZMAT scenario," said 2nd Lt. Toralf Deick, exercise observer controller and volunteer emergency responder with the Zaventem Fire Department. "Good to figure out how good you are and what you need to improve."

Deick planned and coordinated the different training sites based on his past experiences with the Zaventem Fire Department and from his full-time job as a firefighter with the local Vilvoorde Fire Department.

One of Deick's ideas was a joint Zaventem Fire Department and 773rd CST team reacting to a possible radiological and chemical spill caused by a simulated multiple vehicle accident involving a van possibly carrying hazardous material, as well as simulated victims trapped in the wreckage.

The Soldiers' and firefighters' bulky protective suits and equipment turn the simple act of sample testing, monitoring, climbing a ladder or treating a possibly contaminated patient into an extremely difficult physical challenge.

of sports events, building on the relationships of the Saber Guardian participants.

"You want to be able to foster relationships for the future," said Staff Sgt. Juan Ariza, communications NCO with the 7th CSC. "You want your neighbors to be with you.

"This is a joint event, not a U.S. event," Ariza continued. "It's for all the nations to be able to participate and to do something that will last forever."

Taking part in the cultural day helped service members and civilians from all nations learn more about each other in an environment outside of work and out of uniform.

"The important thing about exercises like this is that we're working with our NATO partners and if we only come in and we spend all our time at Novo Selo and we're always doing our job, we're not learning about their backgrounds, their cultures and how they do things," Rosewitz said. "I think this is a fantastic opportunity to work with our many partners to bring us all together and to forge a better team."

The cultural day also provided all the participating nations an opportunity to see just how the U.S. service members are outside of work.

"They see us in a different light," Knight said. "They see us in a non-military side and they see the relaxed and fun side."

"They got to see how we're able to bond together and work together regardless of your rank, what unit you work for or what branch of service you're in," Ariza said. "We're able to come together and work as a team."

The training received during Saber Guardian is designed to replicate the closest possible type of dynamic environment required to address possible future situations and provides service members a unique opportunity to enhance their skills and learn more about the various cultures they will be working with.

"I think this is a fantastic opportunity to work with our many partners to bring us all together and to forge a better team," Rosewitz said. "The realistic thing is that we're always going to go as a coalition to anything that we do and we have got to be able to work with our partners. Cultural day gave us the opportunity to work with them and to build a better team."

"Training is going great," Sgt. Maj. Stef Vandersmissen, Zaventem FD firefighter. "(It is) interesting to see my guys doing their normal duties in a different circumstance for them. The integration with the (773rd) CST is very good."

"Every time we come up here it is a different type of training with a different type of scenario," said Cpl. Eric Song, survey team member, 773rd CST. "(The training) gives us different points of view on how to look at certain incidences. They're very proficient. They're first responders, so their priorities are (extraction and) saving lives."

Song said the 773rd CST's main function is to quarantine, assess, monitor and mitigate a potential CBRN incident that may affect the surrounding population.

Also, during the second day of training in a field outside of town, the firefighters and the 773rd CST CBRN team worked together to decontaminate and triage possible survivors.

"That was unique," said Army Staff Sgt. Jessica Searcy, administrative NCO, 773rd CST. "Normally we only deal with our 22 (person) team."

Mid-week the firefighters and 773rd CST attended a military congress workshop where they listened to instructional speeches and participated in discussions with leading CBRN experts from the Belgian military.

"This is one of my favorite annual training events that I look forward to, (every year)," Song said.

The fourth day had the 773rd CST Soldiers cut open several vehicles using the Jaws of Life after the vehicles' air bags deployed.

The closing ceremony on the fifth day included the laying of a wreath at a memorial for a fallen Zaventem Fire Department firefighter, who had recently died in the line of duty.

"It is always good to work with different nations, because we're in foreign consequence management," said Army Staff Sgt. John Gribble, survey team NCO, 773rd CST.

'Supplement' your knowledge

by Capt. Jeremy F. Brooks
Landstuhl Regional Medical Center

Every Service member knows certain basic skills to survive in combat. Knowledge of dietary supplements is another matter.

Fewer than half of Army Soldiers understand the U.S. government does not require manufacturers to demonstrate the effectiveness of supplements commonly used for bodybuilding, weight loss, energy and endurance, according to a recent study from the U.S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine. One third incorrectly believed the Food and Drug Administration, which oversees regulation of pharmaceuticals, enforces safety requirements for supplements.

In the quest to gain an "edge," many service members resort to dietary supplements. Supplement use is prevalent in the Department of Defense, and consumption occurs for a variety of reasons: to improve performance, to lose weight, to gain muscle mass and/or to improve health. Unfortunately, use of some supplements has resulted in adverse events, which compromised performance and health rather than improve it.

Certain supplements, such as multivitamins, are generally safe, but other supplements can pose a hazard to health and jeopardize careers because of non-listed ingredients that could cause a positive urine drug screen.

Bodybuilding and weight loss supplements are in high-risk categories because of questionable ingredients and should be used with caution, if at all.

Keep in mind, many supplements are mislabeled accidentally or intentionally. In addition, many supplements are not made according to minimal standards of manufacturing. They often are not what they say they are.

In response to such safety concerns and awareness lapses, the Human Performance Resource Center and DOD launched Operation Supplement Safety.

The purpose of OPSS is to educate service members and retirees, their family members, leaders, health care providers and DOD civilians about dietary supplements and how to choose supplements wisely.

Features include access to the Natural Medicines Comprehensive database, searchable with more than 86,000 entries, which include origins and explanations of supplements, existing evidence of effectiveness and known harmful interactions with other supplements, pharmaceuticals and foods. OPSS also provides informational videos, answers to frequently asked questions and more.

Before purchasing or taking a supplement, visit HPRC-online.org/opss. Make sure your supplement meets industry standards with the NSF Certified for Sport online directory of certified products. Search the directory for your specific product. If you're in the market for new supplements, download a list of all certified products before you buy.

Get answers to frequently asked questions about dietary supplement ingredients, performance and weight loss. Learn how to spot bogus claims, suspicious products and other red flags. Check out the OPSS Facebook page for the latest in supplement news and information.

For peak performance, service members should eat healthy and exercise regularly. Supplements aren't intended to be a food substitute, because they can't replicate all of the nutrients and benefits of whole foods, such as fruits and vegetables. So, depending on your situation and your eating habits, dietary supplements may not be worth the expense.

For questions on nutrition classes and services offered at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center, call 590-7144 or 06371-9464-7144.

KMC schools join innovative league

by Jason Tomassini
Digital Promise

Today Digital Promise, a national, independent nonprofit organization authorized by Congress to accelerate innovation in education, announced Department of Defense Dependents Schools-Europe, Kaiserslautern District as one of nine new members accepted into the League of Innovative Schools.

The League of Innovative Schools is a national coalition of school districts and educational agencies that is both a professional learning network and an incubator for innovative educational practices. The League brings together educators, researchers, and entrepreneurs to demonstrate, evaluate, and replicate promising ideas, with the goal of improving student achievement.

"I am thrilled that our district has been selected to participate in the Digital Promise League of Innovative Schools," said Dr. Dell McMullen, Kaiserslautern District superintendent. "Participation in the League gives our district the unique opportunity to collaborate with innovative educators across the United States as we work together to transform to a 21st century learning environment and improve achievement and engagement for all of our students."

The Kaiserslautern District was selected from a competitive and national pool of applicants, based on its leadership, evidence of results, innovative vision for learning powered by technology, and commitment to collaborating with other League members. Upon joining the League, members will share lessons learned, participate in national and regional forums, and partner with research institutions, technology developers, and one another to deliver better results for students.

"The idea behind the League is simple, but ambitious: Innovative superintendents can support each other in transforming the learning environment and improving engagement and achievement," said Karen Cator, president and chief executive officer of Digital Promise. "By adding these nine new members and the sum of their experiences, the League can become an even stronger catalyst for improving opportunity for students around the country."

The nine members of the League of Innovative Schools spring 2014 cohort are:

- Department of Defense Dependents Schools-Europe, Kaiserslautern District: Kaiserslautern, Germany
- Highline Public Schools: Burien, Wash.
- Knox County Schools: Knoxville, Tenn.
- Lexington County School District One: Lexington, S.C.
- Mentor Public Schools: Mentor, Ohio
- Pascack Valley Regional High School District: Montvale, N.J.
- Richland School District Two: Columbia, S.C.
- Rowan-Salisbury Schools: Salisbury, N.C.
- South Fayette Township School District: McDonald, Pa.

With these additions, the League now includes 46 school districts and education agencies in 25 states, representing nearly 3 million students.

"We are excited to welcome the new members of the League and to offer these districts the chance to learn together," said Sara Schapiro, director of the Digital Promise League of Innovative Schools."These exemplary educators recognize that while there is no 'silver bullet' in education, by coming together to tackle some big problems, district leaders, researchers, and entrepreneurs can make a meaningful difference."

New members were officially welcomed March 26 to 28 at the national League of Innovative Schools conference at Sunnyside Unified School District in Tucson, Ariz.

Digital Promise is an independent, bipartisan 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization authorized by Congress to spur innovation in education. Through its work with educators, technologists, researchers and leading thinkers, Digital Promise supports comprehensive research and development to benefit lifelong learners and provide Americans with the knowledge and skills needed to compete in the global economy.

Author visits RMS

Author Victoria Christopher Murray speaks to Ramstein Middle School students. Her message emphasized the importance of setting goals, being organized, working hard and drawing from your experiences in order to find your passion. Students were intrigued as she shared the highlights and challenges from her career in corporate America, as a successful novelist, and as the owner of her own publishing company. The Germany Alumni Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., helped make the author's visit to RMS possible.

Freinsheim holds blossom fest

by Petra Lessoing
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The wine growing community of Freinsheim will celebrate its annual blossom fest under the motto, "Cooking, Arts, Wine," Saturday and Sunday. The town will present the new season's wines and visitors have the opportunity to talk to vintners. Surrounded by an ocean of blossoms, visitors will find a large diversity of culinary specialties, wines and art items throughout the medieval town.

Food specialties include potato pancakes with salmon, trout, pancakes with spinach and sheep cheese, prime boiled beef with horseradish sauce, fresh oysters, salmon rolls with salad, pork filet with asparagus, Thai food and cakes.

The I-Punkt Freinsheim (Tourist Information office) and participating wineries will sell wine passes for €12. This pass will authorize visitors to taste the offered wines on both days.

Wine Princess Kristina and a local band will officially open the fest at 11:30 a.m. on both days at the historical town hall. Guided hiking tours along the trails with trees in blossom will follow right after the official opening.

Wagon rides with Haflinger horses are scheduled to start at noon from the Kreuzhof winery.

The arts studio in Buschhof will display modern arts and serve Mediterranean food.

Various artists will show off their works and paintings in some of the wineries.

Children can have fun in a carnival set up in Weisenheimer Strasse near the Iron Gate. The toy museum will exhibit a collection of old toys.

The Baroque garden invites visitors to take a walk along the medieval town wall.

To get to Freinsheim, travel on autobahn A6 direction Mannheim; take the Grünstadt exit; follow the signs to Kirchheim, Dackenheim and Freinsheim.

Sankt Wendel offers family fun at Easter market

by Petra Lessoing
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The City of Sankt Wendel located in the state of Saarland will hold its annual Easter market 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. today to Sunday. Stores will be open 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

"This year again, we will offer a lot to explore at our Easter market," said Leonie Paqué from the St. Wendel office of arts and city marketing. "We'll have a Easter village, a colorful Ester crown, a giant Easter egg, a petting zoo, an Easter express train, arts and crafts items and diversified activities for children."

Visitors can buy, watch, do handicrafts and play at more than 90 stands. Vendors and exhibitors will sell a wide variety of merchandise such as Easter decorations, woodcarvings, ceramics, pottery, glass and leather items, steel objects, historical lanterns and many other arts and crafts items.

Visitors from all over south west Germany visit St. Wendel's Easter market today to Sunday.

The highlight of the market is the giant Easter crown consisting of 2,000 hand-painted eggs and surrounded by spring flowers.

Happy Easter songs can be heard in the Easter Bunny village around the dome. More than 100 Easter bunnies made of poplar in the Erzgebirge mountains are placed in the bunny kitchen, bunny workshop, bunny restaurant, bunny kindergarten and bunny school.

A local artist will present his exhibition of handmade Easter bunny houses in a tent behind the Rathaus. Visitors can enjoy 20 different sceneries.

Children have the opportunity to craft Easter presents, get their faces painted, try out pottery and take part in dancing, making music and testing archery. Walking acts will entertain visitors in the streets. Each afternoon, the Easter Bunny will make his appearance and pass out Easter eggs.

The Easter Express will offer rides through the city 2 to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Each night, between 5 and 7 p.m., a night watchman will make his rounds through the streets with a lantern.

"Our spring market is an insiders' tip," Paqué said. "People from all over in the southwest German area come to visit us."

Birth announcements are run the first Friday of every month, when space is available.

Ceramics at its best

More than 100 artisans from all over Germany, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg will present their diversity of ceramic works from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday in the center of Homburg.

The organizers, Saarpfalz-Touristik and Homburg City Marketing, hope to lure visitors from the whole region to the 16th annual Homburg Ceramics Market.

Artisans will offer useful ceramics for everyday, gardening objects and fine arts. Items include jewelries made of different clay materials, art sculptures, garden tables in mosaic patterns, and a lot more. Visitors will also find Easter decorations made of ceramics.

The European Culture Park of Bliesbruck-Reinheim will show off various archaeological findings and will allow children to make pottery.

Visitors of the ceramics market might be interested in getting to know some other sights of Homburg — the Schlossberg Caves and the Roman Museum.

On Sunday, Homburg stores will be open from 1 to 6 p.m. The parking garage in the center of town will be open on both days.

JOB OPPORTUNITY

WOUNDED WARRIOR PROJECT

Wounded Warrior Project® (WWP) serves veterans and service members who incurred a physical or mental injury, illness, or wound, co-incident to their military service on or after September 11, 2001. With a mission to honor and empower Wounded Warriors, WWP offers programs that are specifically structured to engage warriors, nurture their minds and bodies, and encourage their economic empowerment. Warrior families and caregivers are provided comfort, care, and education to help support the recovery of their Wounded Warriors.

JOB OPPORTUNITY:

Wounded Warrior Project is seeking qualified applicants for a full-time, salaried Outreach Coordinator (OC) position to support WWP Alumni and outreach programs in the LRMC and Ramstein area. The OC is responsible for regularly communicating, networking, mentoring, and conducting outreach to warriors located in the major military facilities/installations. The successful candidate will also coordinate with family members and the DOD/VBA/VHA offices to ensure warriors' needs and medical care are met. This position assists with the planning of WWP Alumni events (recreational activities, Project Odyssey, etc.) and also serves as a WWP representative at events benefitting the organization (i.e., media opportunities, fundraising events, etc.).

REQUIREMENTS:

- ★ Current work residence permit or SOFA status to work in Germany.
- ★ Bachelor's degree or 2 years relevant military work experience required.
- ★ Experience with military treatment facilities and/or military medical separation/retirement process.
- ★ Experience in relationship-building with military organizations, veterans associations, and other targeted constituents.
- ★ Experience in organizing and coordinating events.
- ★ Must be able to travel 25% to 50% of the time (both domestically and internationally).
- ★ Valid U.S. driver's license.

2014 RAMSTEIN CLINIC SPORTS PHYSICALS

Annual health screening physicals are required for students who wish to participate in sports.

The 86th Medical Group will be conducting sports physicals by appointment only, on Saturday, May 31, 2014 for youth ages 6-18 years old enrolled to the Ramstein Clinic. Appointments open for scheduling on May 6, 2014. The physicals will be performed at the Ramstein Clinic building 2114 (main clinic) from 0800-1545 and are valid for one year. Appointments can be made by calling 479-CARE (2273) or 06371-46-2273 starting on May 6, 2014. The MDG will provide all necessary paperwork for this examination. Families need to arrive 30 minutes prior to the scheduled appointment to complete paperwork and the necessary pre-examination testing. If a child wears glasses, please bring them to the appointment and have your children wear comfortable clothing, such as a tee shirt and a pair of shorts.
