Happy anniversary, sister wing

Brig. Gen. Mark Dillon, 86th Airlift Wing commander, visited Poland's 3rd Airlift Wing at Powidz Air Base Tuesday, marking the one-year anniversary of the "sister wing" relationship between the two units.

The wings began working closely in 2008, when the Polish air force first entertained the idea of vastly improving their airlift capabilities by purchasing refurbished E-model C-130 aircraft from the U.S. inventory.

In June 2010, after Poland established a fleet of five C-130s, the two airlift units signed a letter of intention, legally making them sisters.

Dillon made his annual visit to Powidz after signing a letter of intention last year in June. By signing the letter of intention, the 86th AW and the 3rd AW became "sister wings" in an effort to improve operational capabilities.

AF leaders ready to repeal 'don't ask, don't tell'

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Air Force Michael Donley, Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Norton Schwartz and Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force James A. Roy issued the following statement today:

Today marks a significant milestone in the history of the Department of Defense and the U.S. Air Force. The secretary of defense and the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff certified that the Department of Defense is ready to implement the repeal of the law commonly known as "don't ask, don't tell."

Over the past seven months, the Air Force has embarked on a vigorous effort to prepare for the repeal and has provided education and training materials to help all Airmen understand what is expected in a post-repeal environment. While congressional language stipulates that repeal will not occur for another 60 days after certification by the DOD and President (Barack) Obama, the Air Force stands ready to implement this change with the same unparalleled professionalism we have demonstrated with every transformation that we have undertaken in peace and war.

Flags switched to give proper respects, follow age-old regulation

by Staff Sgt. Travis Edwards
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The German and American flags flying in front of the 86th Airlift Wing command building have switched positions recently to give prominence to the German flag.

The change took place July 20 and there has been a flood of questions about it, said Master Sgt. Eugene "J" Berry, 86th Airlift Wing protocol office superintendent.

"The (86th AW) has received numerous calls about the flags being wrong after the switch," he said. "We explain to them the agreement and how the position of honor is given to the German flag."

The aforementioned agreement, Flite Document No. 7500721 between Germany and U.S. Forces in Europe from 1958, states that when flown outside and together, the German flag will be placed in the position of honor (to the right) of its American counterpart. This is determined from the flag's actual position in relation to other flags next to it.

> "I didn't know (about the change), but it is appropriate. It is healthy to have the national flag as a symbol of pride for your country. It's nice to see the German flag honored on Ramstein."
> — Eva Maldonado, 86th AW host nation adviser.

"These standards hadn't been in any Air Force regulation, we were just unaware of the document until it was recently pointed out," Berry said.

Berry added that the call came from the NATO headquarters on Ramstein to the U.S. Air Forces in Europe protocol office, who then contacted the wing protocol office about the discrepancy.

"It's the best way we can show our host nation respect every day," Berry said.

However, this placement is not unlike other nations that host American military members. Italy has a similar story.

According to Army in Europe Regulation 840-10, "The position of honor is given to the Italian national flag on outdoor garrison and installation flagpoles."

"I didn't know (about the change), but it is appropriate," said Eva Maldonado, 86th AW host nation adviser. "It is healthy to have the national flag as a symbol of pride for your country. It's nice to see the German flag honored on Ramstein."

405th AFSB recognizes employees for excellence

by Jennifer L. King
405th Army Field Support Brigade Public Affairs

The 405th Army Field Support Brigade held a quarterly awards ceremony July 8 at the brigade headquarters on Daenner Kaserne in Kaiserslautern.

During the ceremony, Manuel Balderaz, the acting brigade security officer, was recognized as the Department of the Army Civilian of the Quarter; Kurt Mihm, a logistics assistance representative for the U.S. Army Tank-automotive and Armaments Command, was selected as the LAR of the Quarter; Carlo Franchini, who works for the Army Field Support Battalion-Italy at Leghorn Army Depot, received an award as the Host Nation Employee of the Quarter; Heinz Kaffenberger, the director of the Directorate of Logistics operations in Wiesbaden, was honored as the DOL Employee of the Quarter; and Melissa Pierce was named the Family Member of the Quarter.

"I believe that it is very important that we take the time to recognize our peers who go above and beyond their duty each and every day to serve our Soldiers," said Col. Ronald Green, the commander of the 405th AFSB. "Too often, we get caught up in our day-to-day routines and neglect to properly recognize those who are truly making a difference."

Green, who gave out more than 65 awards during the ceremony, also recognized the nominees in each category during the ceremony, as well as handing out length of service recognitions and other awards.

"I'm excited to come back a year after establishing our sister wing (relationship). This is an exciting time for us," Dillon said. "It's a friendly reminder of the wonderful work that (our two countries have) been in cooperation with for the last 10 years — in Iraq, in Afghanistan and humanitarian operations around the world."

The two wings regularly train together, practicing airdrops, low-level flying and aeromedical evacuation. The purpose of the training is to prepare the two wings to respond cooperatively to emergencies in the European theater. Over time, camaraderie and friendly rivalry has developed between the flight crews of the two wings, improving performance on both sides. The next cooperative training is scheduled for October.

"This program is, for Polish armed forces, very important. We count on very good cooperation with the 86th Airlift Wing," said Polish air force Col. pil. Slawomir Zakowski, 3rd AW commander. "We hope to not only develop a flying program but also a ground program. Our idea is to create a small Ramstein here in Powidz."

With the addition of the C-130E, the 3rd AW has dramatically increased their global reach. So far this year, the wing has made more than 1,000 airdrops and has flown more than 14,000 hours.

During the visit, Zakowski gave Dillon an overview on the 3rd AW's progress and new implementations developed over the course of the year, and future investments such as a cross docking cargo port, a garrison-roofed target range, and modernizing the airfield surface.

Polish air force Col. pil. Slawomir Zakowski, 3rd Airlift Wing commander, talks with Brig. Gen. Mark Dillon, 86th Airlift Wing commander and Col. William Ward, 86th Operations Group commander, Tuesday at Powidz Air Base, Poland.

"We have a lot in common. It's great to get an opportunity to get together," Dillon said. "I look forward to continued cooperation in the future."

The 3rd Airlift Brigade Command was officially formed in 2007 and later transformed into the 3rd Airlift Wing in 2009. Its main purpose is to organize and support logistic air transport and airborne operations. The wing also assists in medical evacuations and international search and rescue missions.

Powidz AB also utilizes aircraft such as the C-295M "CASA," which is used for tactical operations, and the Mi-series transport helicopter.

18th MP Bde. welcomes new commander

by Staff Sgt. Michael J. Taylor
21st TSC Public Affairs

MANNHEIM, Germany — More than 1,500 Soldiers, family members and civilians from the 18th Military Police Brigade, 21st Theater Sustainment Command, were on hand to welcome a new commander during a change of command ceremony held July 15 on Benjamin Franklin Village here.

The incoming commander, Col. Brian Bisacre, brings nearly 22 years of military experience with him to the command. He has previously served with units such as the 25th Infantry Division, 82nd Airborne Division, 8th Military Police Brigade and the U.S. Northern Command, just to name a few.

"It was my great honor and privilege to take command of this storied brigade," Bisacre said. "Every change of command ceremony is special. It represents change as the outgoing commander hands the colors to his successor and preserves continuity through the celebration of both the rich history and traditions of the unit and the numerous accomplishments of the outgoing commander."

Maj. Gen. Patricia E. McQuistion, commanding general of the 21st TSC, presided over the ceremony.

"I know the Bisacres will continue the exceptional leadership the 18th MP Brigade and their families have come to expect and we are delighted to have you on the team," she said.

"My change of command was made even more special as it also marked and celebrated the retirement of Col. Tom Evans, the outgoing brigade commander," Bisacre said after the ceremony.

Evans left the 18th MP Bde. and the Army after 32 years of dedicated service. His commitment and selfless service to the nation were highlighted during the ceremony.

Spending more than eight years of his career in Germany, Evans commanded at every level within the 18th Military Police Brigade, from company to battalion to brigade. He also deployed with the brigade in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

"Tom Evans' legacy is now etched into the history of this great brigade forever. On behalf of all the Soldiers and families of the 18th Military Police Brigade, we wish them the very best as they transition to the next chapter of their lives," Bisacre said.

"Tom is a unique leader, a thorough professional and someone who brings this fantastic energy and light heartedness into everything he does. He takes his job and his unit very seriously but he does not take himself so," McQuistion said. "We wish him all the best as he heads to Amarillo, Texas. Amarillo is about to get a lot more fun."

Bisacre said that as this chapter of the brigade closes, another opens.

"My wife Cyndi and I are humbled and honored to join the brigade's ranks," he said. "We want to thank the wonderful people we have met who have assisted us during this transition."

Biscare said they could not feel more welcome.

"I am truly honored to command this historic and storied brigade and will strive every day to make our brigade better," Bisacre said.

405th AFSB employees complete CBA course

by Jennifer L. King
405th Army Field Support Brigade Public Affairs

Employees of the 405th Army Field Support Brigade completed a weeklong cost benefit analysis course July 15 that was taught by professors from St. Ambrose University at the Kaiserslautern Community and Activity Center.

The course, which is designed to teach employees how to financially compare the cost of a mission versus the benefit, was funded by the U.S. Army Sustainment Command. More than 30 Soldiers, civilians and host nation employees from the brigade headquarters, the Directorate of Logistics, the 21st Theater Sustainment Command, the 409th Contracting Support Command, the Joint Multinational Training Command and the Theater Logistics Support Center-Europe attended the training.

"In order to host this training, we had to collaborate with multiple Army units, including ASC, the 21st TSC and TLSC-E," said Carroll Randall, who works in the brigade S-3 and was the lead coordinator for the course. "There was a lot of detailed planning involved, but the benefits far outweighed the challenges because so many personnel throughout the European theater were able to take advantage of this training."

Joi McIntosh (left), who works for the 405th Army Field Support Brigade's support operations office, receives a certificate of completion from Dr. John Byrne, a professor with St. Ambrose University, after completing the cost benefit analysis course in Kaiserslautern July 15.

The training, which included a real-time execution of the CBA process, covered a variety of brigade operations, such as determining the best mix of support to future deployments of the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team and determining the best source of repair for the Joint Military Training Center. The training included slide building, criteria evaluation and courses of action development. Each team also briefed their final product, including an executive summary and decision matrix, to either Maj. Gen. Patricia McQuistion, the commander of the 21st TSC, Scott Welker, the ASC deputy commander, Col. Ronald Green, the commander of the 405th AFSB, or Helmut Haufe, the TLSC-E director.

"The training was incredibly successful because we were able to focus on current brigade operations and determining the best course of action for missions we currently support," Randall said. "This made the training directly relevant to our daily tasks."

Green said he believes this training is particularly important due to the recent changes in the brigade's mission.

"This training was especially important as we move forward to fully integrate the DOLs into our operations," Green said. "In addition to the training that the personnel received, we were also able to learn more about the DOL mission, and DOL personnel were able to learn more about the Army Materiel Command mission."

The 405th AFSB accepted operational control of the DOLs in the European theater from the U.S. Army Installation Management Command-Europe earlier this year. The brigade will accept full control of the DOLs in 2012.

1st CBCS exemplifies unity of purpose

by Capt. Jeffrey Pierdomenico
1st Combat Communications Squadron

Airmen from the 1st Combat Communications Squadron embodied total force integration this week when they hosted a combined exercise with their counterparts from the Air National Guard and Reserve.

During the event, more than 100 members of the 35th CBCS from Tinker Air Force Base, Okla., and 236th CCS from the Louisiana Air National Guard deployed to Ramstein with their tactical communications equipment for a two-week exercise focusing on integration of several new communications technologies, interoperability and combined training.

"Total force integration is more than a military catch phrase. It describes the unity and cooperation between active-duty, Reserve and National Guard units," said Lt. Col. Keith Mueller, 1st CBCS commander. "When the opportunity was available to host this event at the (1st CBCS), I wanted to capitalize on the invaluable training opportunity — not only for the technical aspects, but for the partnerships to be built."

During the event, the three squadrons deployed their tactical communication equipment to build a "Hub/Spoke" network, which simulates a main operating base with two geographically separated units operating as one communication element. In the future, this type of configuration will be used to support a large-scale expeditionary Joint Task Force with one or more forward operating bases.

The 1st CBCS learned during its involvement in operations Odyssey Dawn and Unified Protector, deploying in this type of tactical network configuration saves "space" on the satellite services, as the "hub" accesses network services through the Defense Information Systems Agency before distributing them to the "spoke" sites. Satellite access time and network service quickly become a premium during large-scale employments.

Parallel to the operational exercise, seven additional training classes are being instructed by members of the 236th CCS and Georgia Air National Guard Combat Regional Training Center. These classes cover many areas of the tactical communications world, including PSC-5 radios, routers and switches, host base security systems, and the newest version of the deployable network control center.

Nearly all of the classes are taught and attended by active-duty, Guard and Reserve Airmen.

This exercise was a great opportunity, said Capt. Harry Trosclair, 236th CCS detachment commander.

"Establishing comprehensive communications between the different units provided realistic training, resulting in valuable lessons learned," he said. "In the Air Force's high-tempo environment, exercises like this are invaluable to prepare our troops for real-world commitments."

Kathleen Marin, Installation Management Command Europe's acting director, congratulates Scott Livingston, U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern safety manager, for his role in the garrison earning the Army Safety Composite Risk Management Award.

Garrison earns Army safety award

U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern

During a recent award ceremony, Kathleen Marin, Installation Management Command Europe acting director, presented the Army Safety Composite Risk Management Award to U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern.

Scott Livingston, the garrison safety manager, accepted the award from Marin who commended his spirit and passion for safety that helped coach and mentor garrison staff to safety excellence, she said. In Kaiserslautern, safety is not a program, but a culture, she said.

"You infuse that spirit into your home here at U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern," Marin said. "Continue to be role models for the installation management community."

To earn the award, Army garrisons worldwide submitted packages to the Installation Management Command, headquartered in San Antonio, Texas. Of the 40 nominations submitted, Kaiserslautern was forwarded to the Army Combat Readiness/Safety Center for selection.

The garrison provides facility and community services to support 42 tenant commands in Kaiserslautern. That includes administrative support, fire and emergency response, law enforcement, religious programs, public affairs, and information technology. Marin highlighted how the garrison supported nine railhead missions with no injuries and how the garrison's logistics directorate reduced vehicles accidents by 50 percent.

Garrison programs also offer recreational facilities and services to Soldiers, families and civilians, including parks, libraries, child care and youth services, fitness centers, restaurants, and auto hobby shops. The Directorate of Families and Morale, Welfare and Recreation held 135 community events, serving more than 25,000 Soldiers and families, with no accidents or incidents, Marin said.

"That's incredible when you consider all the moving parts and people involved," Marin said. "Your overall garrison accident and injury rate is 25 percent below the Army norm. That doesn't happen by accident."

The Belgium air force team waves their flag in support of fellow teammates at the Air Mobility Rodeo 2011 "Fit to Fight" competition July 24 at Joint Base Lewis-McChord, Wash. Rodeo is the U.S. Air Force's and Air Mobility Command's premier international combat skills and flying operations competition designed to develop and improve techniques, procedures and interoperability, while optimizing international mobility partnerships and enhancing mobility operations.

International participants add 'flavor' to Air Mobility Rodeo 2011

by Master Sgt. Scott T. Sturkol
Air Mobility Rodeo 2011 Public Affairs

JOINT BASE LEWIS-MCCHORD, Wash. — At the opening ceremonies for Air Mobility Rodeo here July 24, service members from more than 25 nations were among the nearly 3,000 mobility personnel in formation around the McChord Field flightline.

Those international partners each carried their country's flag to their formations, creating what one person announced as a "sea of flavorful colors." That may also describe what the international partners bring to the Rodeo 2011 environment: flavor.

There are seven countries participating in events at Rodeo: Belgium, the Netherlands, Pakistan, South Korea, Saudi Arabia, Spain and Sweden. Additionally, there are more than 20 countries observing the competition, including Argentina, Australia and Canada, as well as India, Israel, Poland, Singapore and New Zealand. For the first time, the African nations of Algeria, Botswana, Ethiopia, Nigeria and South Africa are observers at the Rodeo. They also attended the International Airdrop Symposium that was a lead-in event to Rodeo 2011.

Lt. Col. David Mackenzie, the deputy director for U.S. Air Forces Africa's plans and requirements directorate at Ramstein, is working with the African observers at Rodeo. He said their participation at the symposium and observing Rodeo is critical to partnership building not only internationally, but also for the African Union.

"For the attendees from Africa, they are looking to build or improve upon an airdrop capability for their air forces," Mackenzie said during the symposium, which also took place here July 19 to 21. "By attending, these five countries gain insight to procedures and methods of airdrop.

"More specifically, their attendance also helps them understand more about humanitarian airdrops in support to the African Union," Mackenzie added. "In the long term, it's about Africans helping Africans from the knowledge they gain here."

South African air force officer Lt. Col. Pine Pieneaar, who as an observer, said he will not only learn from the airdrop symposium but also from observing Rodeo airdrop events, noting the importance of these airdrops.

"The value of airdrops in humanitarian missions cannot be underestimated," Pieneaar said. "Although the cost (of airdrops) may be high, the value of human life is higher."

Though some like Pieneaar are at Rodeo 2011 for the first time, others are making repeat appearances. For Adjutant Joris Retty, a C-130 loadmaster from the Belgium air force, this year marks his third Rodeo. He was previously here in 2005 and 2009. This year, when one of his teammates fell ill, he jumped at the chance to come back and help coach the rest of his team.

"Nothing motivates me more than the spirit of competition," he said. "It's great to meet people from other nations and socialize. I actually went to loadmaster school at Little Rock Air Force Base in Arkansas, so it's nice to be back in America. I can't wait to get started."

Besides the opening ceremonies for Rodeo, the first event that included the international competitors was the "Fit to Fight" competition. This event has five-person teams complete push-ups, sit-ups and a mile-and-a-half run.

During that first event, one observer said, "Spectators cheered, waved banners and even dressed in costumes. Chants in several languages also echoed all around."

It's that "flavor" that was reflected in Col. R. Wyn Elder's welcome to the teams in the opening ceremonies.

"To all teams and our international participants, we are honored by your presence today at our competition," said Elder, who is the 62nd Airlift Wing commander at McChord Field. "Let camaraderie define victory."

(Staff Sgt. J.G. Buzanowski and Senior Airman Abigail Klein also contributed to this story.)

A P.108B is seen here. Note the blisters just beyond the wing training edge for the gunners.

by Dr. Marshall Michel
52nd Fighter Wing historian

Though the Italian general Giulio Douhet is often considered the father of strategic bombing, his theories were not heard by the Italian air force after World War I, and by the mid-1930s, when America and Great Britain were developing four engine long range bombers, Italy had none.

In 1937 the Piaggio company set out to change this with a usual wooden, four-engine bomber — the P.50-1, which had its four engines mounted in two nacelles, one tractor "puller" in the front and one "pusher" in the rear. It was a resounding failure but, undaunted, Piaggo's designer Giovanni Casiraghi pushed on to a larger machine, the P.108.

The P.108 was more conventional, a low-wing, all metal monoplane with its four Piaggio 1,350 horsepower radial engines in conventional nacelles.

The first prototype P.108B (Bombardiere) flew on Nov. 24, 1939, and performed well enough to be immediately ordered into production. Deliveries in 1941 began to the 274a Squadriglia (Squadron), commanded by Bruno Mussolini, the son of Italian dictator Benito Mussolini.

The P.108B carried a crew of eight and had two unique features for bombers of this era. First was an extended lower nose to house the bombardier, an extension that made it look like the bomber was sticking out its lip.

Though unusual looking, it allowed the nose turret to be set further back and left its gunner free to move while the bombardier concentrated on the bomb run. Allied bombers had the bombardier and nose gunner in the same position, making it very crowded on the bomb run.

The P.108B's main defensive armament was also unique — two unmanned hydraulically powered turrets with two .50 caliber guns each mounted in the outer-engine wing nacelles.

The turrets were controlled by two gunners in bubble blisters in the fuselage, similar to the much later American B-29.

"Though unusual looking, it allowed the nose turret to be set further back and left its gunner free to move while the bombardier concentrated on the bomb run. Allied bombers had the bombardier and nose gunner in the same position, making it very crowded on the bomb run."

The P.108B's performance was close to the B-24 or B-17 but the Italian bomber had vastly inferior altitude performance, with a practical ceiling of 20,000 feet (versus the B-17's and B-24's 36,000 feet) because its engines lacked superchargers.

Production and deliveries were slow, and on Aug. 7, 1941, 274a Squadriglia suffered a major blow when its commander, Bruno Mussolini, flew a P.108 into a house near Pisa and was killed.

P.108Bs were intended for long range night bombing raids and were not sent into combat until June 28, 1942, on a night raid against the British stronghold of Gibraltar. This first raid involved five bombers, but while four hit the target (causing little damage) all but one had to divert to other bases after the mission.

This was the first sign of the main problem with the P.108B: reliability. The powerful engines were basically two smaller engines in tandem and proved prone to failure.

The complex hydraulic gun turrets rarely worked, and, most importantly, the Piaggio company and its suppliers were not able to produce spare parts fast enough.

After the abortive raid on Gibraltar, crews began an intensive three-month program of long range mission training then began a series of small, long-range raids against Gibraltar and Oran, Algeria. These missions produced limited results, and as Allied night fighters improved, the P. 108B losses steadily increased, soon reaching about 33 percent a month.

Because Piaggio was only capable of building the large aircraft slowly, the 274a — the only squadron equipped with the P.108 — normally had only about eight serviceable aircraft and even in its most productive period flew less that 30 sorties a month.

At the same time, American and British bombers were proving Douhet's theories. When the Allied-Italian armistice was declared on Sept. 8, 1943, only nine of Italy's heavy bombers remained, most of which were sabotaged so as not to fall into German hands.

Dental clinic on Kleber Kaserne opening soon

After years of hard work, the U.S. Army Health and Dental Clinic on Kleber Kaserne will soon be an even better facility than before with combined medical and dental services, said Maj. Lawanda D. Warthen, U.S. Army Health Clinic-Kaiserslautern commander.

"My sincerest gratitude goes to the (Army Medical Department), (European Regional Medical Command), and (Landstuhl Regional Medical Center) staff and agencies, along with our community unit supporters who have worked so hard to make our renovated clinic a reality," Warthen said.

Warthen said she also wanted to thank Maj. Gen. Patricia E. McQuistion, the commanding general of the 21st Theater Sustainment Command, Brig. Gen. Nadja Y. West, the commanding general Europe Regional Medical Center, and Col. Jeffrey B. Clark, LRMC commander, for their dedication and leadership.

The new building will replace the existing medical clinic pre-fab containers and the dental clinics at Pulaski Barracks and Bldg. 3245 on Kleber Kaserne. The facility will have the capacity for treating an additional 3,700 to 5,000 beneficiaries and will continue to provide primary health and dental care as its main focus. Additional services will include radiology laboratory, dental services, behavioral health, pharmacy, optometry, physical therapy and primary care. The Soldier Medical Readiness Center will accommodate in-processing, readiness and out-processing physical exams, hearing conservation and other services that support of medical aspects of military readiness.

The move to the renovated clinic comes at a perfect time as the clinic begins its Patient-Centered Medical Home model, an innovative program for improving primary care. The PCMH enables partnerships between individual patients and their personal physicians and, when appropriate, the patient's family. Information will be provided more efficiently through registries, IT, health information exchange and other means to ensure patients get the indicated care when and where they need and want it in a culturally and linguistically appropriate manner.

Look for the opening of the new clinic this summer.

Community Resources, Health Fair takes place Aug. 11 on Kleber Kaserne

The U.S. Army Health Clinic-Kaiserslautern and Patient Advisory Council-Kleber will host a free Community Resources and Health Fair from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Aug. 11 at the Kleber Gym on Kleber Kaserne.

The clinic and its Patient Advisory Council work together to provide the health care needs and address the concerns of the community, which include education, health navigation and a variety of other health-related issues. Information about the health fair will be available from area agencies, including Landstuhl Regional Medical Center. Planned offerings include nutrition, optometry, dental, EDIS, cholesterol, blood pressure, BMI and behavioral health information. Attendees will also find information at booths set up by local businesses and organizations, such as Army Community Service; Morale, Welfare and Recreation; United Service Organizations; American Red Cross; Outdoor Recreation; Defense Commissary Agency; and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Clinic medical director Dr. James Johansen, along with his team of providers, will be onsite during the fair. The Patient Advisory Council-Kleber will be asking participants to complete a survey to be used to assess the needs of the community, giving community members the chance to inform the health clinic and council about emerging issues. Past suggestions that have been implemented include the Sports Physicals Clinic where the sports clinic provides required examinations for children in afterschool sports on non-school days and the Well-Woman Day.

"Letting our beneficiaries know how to take responsibility for their own health, along with providing access to good health care and knowledge of prevention, are the main goals of this event," said Maj. Lawanda D. Warthen, U.S. Army Health Clinic-Kaiserslautern commander.

Talent shines at Apollo Night

by Senior Airman Katherine Holt
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

"MOVE! Get out the way, get out the way, get out the way," is what contestants at Apollo Night do not want to hear coming from the DJ's booth. Once they hear that song, their time is up.

Though this Apollo Night is a spinoff of the original Amateur Night at the Apollo that debuted in 1934, it harnesses the spirit of the Harlem-based show.

Apollo Night is no ordinary talent show. The audience decides how long a contestant will be allowed to continue performing and if the audience is pleased, the contestant can finish their act. If the audience is not pleased, the audience will "boo" until the contestant is removed from the stage.

More than 200 patrons participated in the judging of their peers during the event at Armstrong's Club on Vogelweh July 23.

"I take my hat off to all those who came forward and performed," said Tech. Sgt. Jaison Fletcher, 86th Communications Squadron base records adviser and audience member. "It takes a lot of nerve to get up in front of such a large group of your peers and display your talent."

This year, Apollo Night consisted of 12 contestants with talents ranging from spoken word poetry to singing to rapping. Some of the contestants performed original material while others belted out their rendition of songs previously written by recording artists.

One of the contestants used Apollo Night as an opportunity to expose her talent to more people.

"Apollo Night is not about winning," said Ella "Scorpion Queen" Jones, an Apollo Night contestant. "I have a story to tell and a message to give. The more I get out and promote myself, the more lives I can touch."

But contestants aren't the only entertainment of the night. The emcee, Shanda "Dizzy" Allmond-Misse has been in the business of entertaining for 16 years and has been the host of Apollo Night since it started seven years ago. She is also in charge of recruiting.

"People with talent are attracted to me," Allmond-Misse said. "Talent comes from everywhere, and most times talent approaches me after every show."

Allmond-Misse said Apollo Night sells itself to aspiring artists and she doesn't have to actively search for contestants.

"Surprisingly enough, the thought of performing in front of a crowd that could potentially boo them doesn't discourage them from wanting to participate," she said.

Allmond-Misse said this show's audience wasn't as unforgiving as some she has seen in the past.

The show is in such demand, that two years ago it went from once to twice a year with the next show scheduled for early 2012.

"I really enjoyed the festivities, the emcee was superb and everyone was dressed to impress," Fletcher said. "All in all, I really enjoyed the night."

Command streamlines moves during busy season

by Army Sgt. 1st Class Tyrone C. Marshall Jr.
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command officials are working hard to continually improve processes for military families moving to new duty stations during an exceptionally busy summer, the command's personal property branch chief said Monday.

Major points of emphasis for the peak moving season are the newly designed Defense Personal Property System and new rules to accompany it, John Johnson said.

"In November of 2008, we started phasing in a new (information technology) system and a new set of business rules to move personal property," Johnson said. "So 2011 is the second year we've actually been using the system. We're also learning new aspects of the system as we go along, and we're continuing to discover better ways to move personal property."

Johnson said comparisons of the last two years can be deceiving, because the first year was split between the old and new systems.

"Between last year and this year, the old legacy system program has gone away," he said. "So we had a separate set of challenges last year than we have this year. But I think, overall, this year people were more informed on how to prepare themselves for moves, so I think that was a success."

Cross communication among the services, industry and Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command officials has led to adjustments along the way and better communication with personal property shipping offices worldwide to facilitate shipments this summer, Johnson said, noting that the command is using "hot washes," similar to after-action reviews, to tackle persistent issues.

> "Our big job is really to make sure that we've got a healthy program with qualified carriers and rules and policies in place so folks know how to move personal property specifically for (the Defense Department). Then we really try to help facilitate the moves or any issues or challenges that come up in the movement of the personal property, working extensively with the military services and the Coast Guard."

"Our big job is really to make sure that we've got a healthy program with qualified carriers and rules and policies in place so folks know how to move personal property specifically for (the Defense Department)," Johnson said. "Then we really try to help facilitate the moves or any issues or challenges that come up in the movement of the personal property, working extensively with the military services and the Coast Guard.

"We talk to industry a lot as well," he added. "Industry is broken up into an international market and a domestic market. So there are two associations that we deal pretty exclusively with."

With so many movements across the Defense Department during a popular time to move, Johnson said, resources have become somewhat strained.

"From May 15 to probably July 31 is what we typically call our peak season, when everyone wants to move in the summer," he said. "So the competition for resources is a little tight. It's always a challenge to get people picked up.

"But we've had additional challenges as well the last three years, because the economy hasn't been that good," he said. "Industry infrastructure is kind of reduced in size, so there are just not as many trucks, drivers and local agents to do the packing as there was three or four years ago."

> "What we're really looking to do is make sure personal property is picked up and delivered at the other end with the least amount of damage or inconvenience to the customer … It's based on best value, not low cost like it used to be. So the carrier that comes to your door should be one that has been providing good service to get that business in the first place."

Johnson said another challenge presented itself this summer, as well, noting that many major companies have been relocating people, stretching the moving industry thinner.

"They saw that business increase, so again, (that creates) even more competition for the scarce resources to move (military) folks in the summer," Johnson said.

An additional 15,000 to 17,000 Army-specific moves resulting from base realignments and closures also are part of this summer's equation, he added.

Implementation of the Defense Personal Property System, developed in part by U.S. Transportation Command, emphasizes convenience and customer service to service members and DOD civilians, Johnson said.

"What we're really looking to do is make sure personal property is picked up and delivered at the other end with the least amount of damage or inconvenience to the customer," Johnson said, noting that the days of the job going to the lowest bid are over.

"It's based on best value, not low cost like it used to be," he said. "So the carrier that comes to your door should be one that has been providing good service to get that business in the first place."

The Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command, with headquarters at Scott Air Force Base, Ill., is the Army component of U.S. Transportation Command, which also has its headquarters at Scott.

Get it all out!

The group Maatwerk from the Netherlands will present a musician's contest during the street theater and music festival at 4 and 7 p.m. Aug. 6 in the yard of Kaiserslautern's Stiftskirche.

The "Get it all out!" street theater and music festival features the French group Les Goulus, who will present their show "Les Horsemen" at 11:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Aug. 6, and 3:30 and 5:30 p.m. Aug. 7 near the Stiftskirche in Kaiserslautern.

by Petra Lessoing
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Kaiserslautern's center will be the stage for a street theater festival of its own kind Aug. 5 to 7. For the fifth year, Lebenshilfe Kaiserslautern (an association for the mentally disabled) will sponsor the event called "Alles Muss Raus!" or "Get it all out!" in cooperation with Lebenshilfe Arts and Culture, the city of Kaiserslautern and the Rheinland-Pfalz Culture Summer.

In their official invitation, organizers promise to provide a top-class and exciting program.

More than 20 theater, artistic and music groups will perform in the streets and on squares in Kaiserslautern. About 200 disabled and non-disabled artists from Germany, France, Belgium, Denmark, Romania, Austria and the Netherlands will meet and celebrate together.

The festival will officially open with a concert at 8 p.m. Aug. 5 in the Fruchthalle, known as Kaiserslautern's concert hall. The French band Teranga will play traditional African music mixed with reggae and Latin jazz.

Teranga means hospitality and that's what the group tries to bring across to the audience.

This is the only event of the festival that is not free. Tickets at the door cost €5.

At 8:30 p.m., the brass band Fanfara Kalashnikov will invite the audience to dance to their interpretations of Polka, Klezmer, Mambo and Bossa at the stage near Stiftskirche in the center of town.

At 10 p.m., Compagnie Luc Amoros will represent the world with live painting, singing and music on Stiftsplatz.

Audiences can watch a total of 50 performances from 11 a.m. until midnight Aug. 6, and from 1 to 10 p.m. Aug. 7. Street theater ensembles and music bands will present nostalgic flying acrobatics, giant balls, a museum of life, puppets, walking acts, dancing and music of all kinds: brass music, rock and pop music as well as bamboo sounds.

Organizers hope to lure many visitors to the street theater and music festival, where people from different countries will have fun together.

For more information on the festival, visit www.grenzenlos-kultur.de.

Burg Lichtenberg: fortress serves as perfect family getaway

Never defeated, never taken, never occupied by enemy forces, Burg Lichtenberg wanders over the ridges of a Palatinate hill like a goliath.

Only a few kilometers north of Kaiserslautern, off autobahn A62 and near Kusel, the fortress offers a musical museum, geophysical studies center, traditional fests and chances to clamber over ancient stones and climb towers where armored knights once ruled with absolute power.

In modern times, Burg Lichtenberg serves as the perfect family outing just a few kilometers from home on a sunny weekend day.

A loving couple can even marry in the castle church. Then, once they've recited their religious vows, a short walk to the nearby German civil office (Standesamt) helps them complete the process.

They can book rooms in the modern hostel and enjoy the wedding dinner in the cozy "Burgschänke," which specializes in wild game recipes.

Burg Lichtenberg started around 1200 when dukes of Veldenz and Pfalz-Zweibrücken simply stole the land from the Bishop of Reims by building a fortress and absorbing the territory.

Because of its strategic position, the fortress allowed the new owners to control the ever-widening area. However, about 200 years ago, a massive fire destroyed much of the fortress and grounds. Today, the Kusel regional council continues to restore the important buildings that include a fest center, youth hostel, restaurant and three excellent museums.

The Middle Ages Summer Market is held every year, when knights ride again among the festive tents and costumed entertainers in a fantasy world for children and dreamers.

The Museum of Traveling Musicians highlights a special aspect of history in the Pfalz when unemployed workers often turned to music to eke out a living. Bands wandered from town to town giving music lessons and playing for fests and circuses.

As life became even more dire between 1830 and 1850, the Pfalz underwent a flood of emigration to the U.S. There, the musicians carried on their traditions in the famed German bands of Texas and midwest America. George Drumm of Erdesbach, one of those immigrants, composed the White House Hymn "Hail America."

The Museum of Nature Studies, on the other hand, highlights the Pfalz animal and plant life with permanent interactive displays. The bird life of the region appears in their natural habitats and nesting areas, so a touched button brings nature sounds of the land mixed with precise calls from the mounted birds. Multiple touches mixes the bird sounds into a choral sonata.

Geoskop (Museum of the Primitive World) shows the animal and plant world as it existed in these Palatinate mountains 290 million years ago. Rock and mineral exhibits show why this area, and the nearby Idar-Oberstein hills, became the center of historic mining that produced so much raw gemstone upon which the people built their lives.

Burg Lichtenberg and all of the museums open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. with regular guided tours available in English upon request at the Tithing House. For the Hostel, call 06381-2532. The "Burgschänke" restaurant's number is 06381-2633. To arrange a church wedding at the Burg Church, call 06381-1513, and for the civil ceremony, call 06381-9180.

KMC members row the Rhine

by Airman 1st Class Ciara M. Travis
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Members of the KMC were given the opportunity to participate in Race Across the Rhine, a month-long rowing competition here July 1 to 31.

Spanning the length of the Rhine River, participants were required to row a total of 5,000 meters at the Northside, Southside and Vogelweh fitness centers.

The event was open to all Department of Defense and NATO ID cardholders.

The competition drew in approximately 60 people, all competing for the prize — a travel voucher from Ramstein Travel and Tours for the "Castles on the Rhine and River Cruise."

"Offering a variety of fitness challenges and competitions really gets people excited," said Rachel Miller, 786th Force Support Squadron programming specialist. "They love a challenge, especially when there is a reward for their hard work. Fitness is supposed to be fun for everyone."

Although the challenge was open through the entire month of July, for some, the competition was completed after just a few minutes.

"For me, the competition took only 25 minutes so it didn't seem too difficult or time consuming," said Onnie Grisotto, 603rd Air and Space Operations Center program analyst. "It's actually really interesting to think that I've rowed the distance of the Rhine, but it probably isn't comparable to actually rowing the Rhine."

For Grisotto, strategy seemed to prove the most successful way to finish.

"The most difficult part in the entire race was trying to figure out how to row the most effectively to get the best time," Grisotto said. "It was a combination of power and speed, but rhythm was also very important."

Like the "Race Across the Rhine," another fitness challenge will be open for the month of August to all ID cardholders. The Southside, Northside and Vogelweh fitness centers will hold their "Wheels of Steel" contest, this time focusing on cycling.

Participants are asked to keep track of their miles using the honor system and record their data on a personal log kept at the fitness centers. Any indoor-cycling classes also count for log miles. The person with the most miles at the end of the month will receive a prize and a certificate of completion with their mileage.

Mark your calendars for these upcoming fitness events:

» Back to School wing run, 7 a.m. Aug. 4 in Hanger 3, uniform is PT gear.

» Luau 5K Fun Run, 3 p.m. Aug. 17 at the Vogelweh Rod and Gun Club. Wear a lei or your favorite Hawaiian shirt. Military affiliated attire is prohibited.

» 5-A-Side Soccer Tournament, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Aug. 27 at the Southside Fitness Center. Teams will consist of up to eight players and must be 18 or older to participate. There will be prizes for first place and runner up. Those participating must sign up by Aug. 24.

» Memorial Half Marathon, 8 a.m. Sept. 10 at the South Side Fitness Center. Cost is $10. First 300 participants to register get a free T-shirt. Prizes awarded to overall top female and top male first, second and third in the following age divisions: 18 to 29, 30 to 39, 40 to 49 and 50.

Captain America: The First Avenger (PG-13) — Born during the Great Depression, Steve Rogers grew up a frail youth in a poor family. Horrified by the newsreel footage of the Nazis in Europe, Rogers tries to enlist in the Army. However, because of his frailty and sickness, he was rejected. Overhearing the boy's earnest plea, Gen. Chester Phillips offers Rogers the opportunity to take part in a special experiment — Operation: Rebirth. After Rogers is administered with the "Super-Soldier Serum," he emerges from the treatment as Captain America. Armed with his indestructible shield, Captain America continues his war against evil both as a sentinel of liberty and leader of the Avengers
