Airmen build capability with Polish air force

The 86th Aeromedical Evacuation Squadron and 435th Contingency Response Group continuously train to meet sustainable medical readiness throughout the European theater.

Training not only benefits Ramstein Airmen, but also other allies like the Polish air force who have consistently engaged in AE training and familiarization throughout 2012 and 2013.

"All NATO countries benefit from having highly skilled and qualified teams to transport wounded warriors from theater back to higher levels of medical care and eventually back to their home country," said Lt. Col. Kevin D. Hettinger, 435th CRG flight surgeon and Poland AE Building Partnership Capacity team lead.

In early 2012, Polish AE team members visited the 86th AES Airmen on Ramstein. In turn, three months later, a member of the 86th AES attended the first medical evacuation and aeromedical evacuation conference at the Polish Air Force Academy.

Last month, two Airmen from the 86th AES and one Airman from the 435th CRG engaged with Poland again to focus on advancements of the Polish AE team from the previous year.

"The Polish AE team has a goal of obtaining NATO certification for aeromedical evacuation," Hettinger said. "Our team was able to provide some recommendations toward this goal after reviewing published NATO standards for AE and inspection checklists."

Currently, the Polish AE team can transport stabilized Polish troops from Landstuhl Regional Medical Center back to Poland.

"Their team is amazing," said Tech. Sgt. Elizabeth Araujo, 86th Aeromedical Evacuation Squadron technician and fluent Polish speaker. "It's a team of six. They fly as a Critical Care Air Transport Team. They do everything: they receive the phone call, they receive the plane, they set up and they fly."

While the Polish AE team impressed their U.S. counterparts, Polish medical experts continue to work to reach their certification and sharpen their skills.

"It was nice to see how receptive they are and how willing they are to take in that information," Araujo

435th CTS completes humanitarian project

A 435th Construction and Training Squadron engineering team recently completed a humanitarian assistance renovation project in the country of Georgia.

The nine-member team from four different Air Force specialty codes hailed from CTS's military construction flight, which is responsible for humanitarian and exercise-related projects throughout Europe and Africa.

"Being assigned to the MCF is probably the best assignment a CE craftsman could ever have," said Master Sgt. Michael Shaffer, 435th CTS MCF superintendent. "We travel and build with an 18-man team. One day you may be laying tile, then paving a road the next."

The MCF renovated 10 restrooms at a kindergarten in Tbilisi, Georgia. The restrooms were in poor condition with aged tile falling from the walls, inoperable toilets and sinks, and no running hot water.

Beginning April 7, the team spent 54 days in country for the humanitarian project. The Airmen installed 25 new sinks and toilets to replace old fixtures. They retiled the rooms,

SAPR Down Day — step up, step in

by Lt. Gen. Tom Jones
U.S. Air Forces in Europe and Air Forces Africa commander

In this dangerous world, the last enemy our Airmen need to face is one from within our own Air Force family.

Fostering a professional climate free from sexual assault is every Airman's responsibility. That is why we are standing down command mission activities to focus our attention on the serious issue of sexual assault prevention and response. We need to rededicate ourselves to upholding the high standards we committed to when we volunteered to serve in the Air Force.

Remember every Airman is a sensor. Changing our climate will take the active commitment of commanders, supervisors and Airmen at all levels to get out in front of this issue. We must pull together to support victims of sexual assault and ensure allegations are addressed immediately, and we must also have the courage to get involved and stop sexual assault before it happens.

During the upcoming stand-down day (Tuesday), Airmen will have a chance to talk about difficult situations involving sexual assault prevention and response. Take advantage of this time to discuss how you can contribute to workplace professional ethics, responsibilities we have as Airmen to enforce standards, and the debilitating consequences sexual assaults have on our people and readiness.

I need each and every Airman to stand up for one another, to step up and step in to stop sexual assaults and foster a climate of dignity and respect. We can only succeed if we all do our part. Sexual assault is a crime that cannot and will not be tolerated. Our Airmen deserve nothing less.

FOR WANT OF A NAIL

by Lt. Col. Jobie Turner
37th Airlift Squadron commander

"For the want of a nail the shoe was lost,
For want of a shoe the horse was lost,
For want of a horse the rider was lost,
For want of rider, the message was lost,
For want of a message the battle was lost,
For want of a battle the kingdom was lost."

This old proverb illustrates how the failure of a simple task — the shoeing of a horse — can have dire consequences for a larger mission: the prosecution of a battle.

Delving further into the specific act of shoeing a horse, there are many factors that might lead to the lack of a nail. One possibility is the deviation from guidance. If the regulations require the blacksmith to put eight nails in each shoe, but he only puts in seven, he violates the basic rule.

For all of us involved in the larger mission at Ramstein, this seems straight forward. Follow the Air Force instructions or other guidance and do the job.

However, sometimes following the instructions is harder than it looks. What if the guidance is not clear or there are conflicting requirements from another instruction, regulation or supervisor? For example, if each horse requires 32 nails for a complete set, but your unit was only given 28, does using seven nails in each shoe make more sense? Maybe, or maybe not.

When following the rules becomes more complicated, there are several ways to help sort out the problem.

First, know the basic rule and follow it. If you do not know what the rule is, there is no way to know whether you are deviating from it. Procedural guidance in instructions and law are often there because of past mistakes or errors; the adage that the flying manuals are "written in blood" applies. Someone's costly mistakes are now a rule you must follow. When you hear the phrase, "Yes, the regs say that, but we've always done it this way because we are (deployed, at Base X etc.)," the hair on your neck should stand up. Have faith that the rule is there for a reason.

Second, communicate. Let your supervisor know if the task you are required to perform conflicts with the guidance you have. If you need 32 nails, but are only given 28, let them know. Your boss can then either accept the risk or channel the information up the chain of command. Do not expect this communication will go smoothly. If you are saying no, it will not be easy.

Sometimes your chain of command knows other information, or may have waived the requirement, unbeknownst to you. Other times, you may be pointing attention at a situation that is in dire need of correction. It can only be corrected through honest communication.

Finally, understand some rules may hinder mission accomplishment, and those rules need to be waived or changed. Following the rules implies a duty to understand which rules need improvement. The U.S. Air Force wrote the regulations, and these rules can be altered. It is your job to make it right. Take the responsibility to follow the rules or expend the effort to make the rules right. After all, the Air Force doesn't require too many horseshoes, but it does require cyber infrastructure, airplane parts, cargo inspections and trained pilots.

Commander discusses values, expectations for Airmen

by Airman 1st Class Hailey Haux
86th Airlift Wing
Public Affairs

Editor's note: After a week on the ground and getting to know the Airmen of the 86th Airlift Wing, Brig. Gen. Patrick X. Mordente, the wing's new commander, discussed his values and expectations for Airmen and the wing.

Brig. Gen. Patrick X. Mordente

HH: Welcome back to Ramstein. Sir, how do you like being back?

BG Mordente: The whole family was excited when we heard the news. In fact, we spent 3 1/2 years here last time, and we just loved it. It's an exciting mission here; it's a very dynamic wing, and there is a lot going on, all set in a beautiful location. So you can work hard and, at the same time, you can really enjoy some of the historic sites … We are excited about being back.

HH: What are your expectations for the Airmen of the 86th Airlift Wing?

BG Mordente: I expect our Airmen to hold the Air Force standard and to be professional both on duty and off duty. When you put on the uniform, there's a certain trust I think the American people give us, and there's a certain expectation with that. It's a huge responsibility to wear the uniform; we are representatives of our county. I think we've got some great Airmen in the wing; I've been extremely impressed the first week on the ground here with what I've seen. The mission is getting done, and it's getting done very well. We just need to maintain that standard, so that's what I'll be looking for.

HH: From June 2010 to June 2011, you were the commander of the 386th Air Expeditionary Wing in Southwest Asia. How did that previous experience prepare you for this position?

BG Mordente: There's something I find not necessarily unique to this wing, but unique to wings outside of the continental U.S. In some respects, we are in a deployed location here. At any moment, we serve three combatant commands: European Command, Africa Command and Central Command requirements. An Airman on this base could suddenly find a tasking dropped, and they are suddenly picking up their bags, and in 24 hours they are somewhere in North Africa or the Middle East or somewhere supporting a EUCOM requirement. I lived that warfighter focus for a year in the desert, and I think we have that same mindset here. The other thing is this wing is huge. It's an honor and a privilege to be able to command here, but this is definitely not a first-time wing commander job. The experiences I learned in the desert, I'll apply here.

HH: While reading your biography, I noticed you are constantly furthering your education. Why do you think education and professional development are important in today's Air Force?

BG Mordente: It's the whole person concept. Education makes you better in every way. You should always try to expand your horizons. My father was prior enlisted in the military during World War II and got his commission afterward. Six months after his retirement, he got his college degree. One of the things he told me as I was heading off to the academy was, "You know, I loved my career and wouldn't change a thing, but if I could change one thing, I should have taken advantage of the opportunity of the education system in the military." I took that to heart, and I never said no to school. It made me a better officer and a better Airman; I can give back more to the Air Force. I encourage all Airmen to take advantage of educational opportunities. Whether you are a first-term Airman and you decide that after your service it's time to go into the civilian world, or you're a career Airman, either way, we will all put on civilian clothes one day and get another job.

HH: What facet of the Air Force do you find to be the most valuable?

BG Mordente: To me, the most valuable facet of a military career or being someone who wears the uniform is discipline. We are a highly disciplined force. We demand a lot from our Airmen. In my opening talk to my commanders, I ended it with, "If it were easy, everyone would wear the uniform and not everyone does." It's a tough life, but it's hugely rewarding. I think what you will find is, in my opinion, what we're most respected for is discipline.

HH: From your past assignments, what are you most proud of and what do you think you learned the most from?

BG Mordente: What I'm most proud of is my service. Whether you are an airman 1st class or a general officer, you should be proud of what you contribute to the overall team. When I look back, people say, "What are you most proud of?" I've always had good assignments but it's not pride in an assignment, it's pride in the service — what we were doing and what we were accomplishing. As a leader and a squadron commander getting to deploy forward with the 39th, what the team accomplished and what we were able to do made me extremely proud, and I think that's what every Airman should take away. They should look back and say, "I wore the uniform; I served my country."

HH: How do you maintain balance in your personal and professional life?

BG Mordente: I had a great mentor when I was a young captain. I was all speed, no vector and hard charging. He pulled me to the side one time and said, "You work hard, and I appreciate that. But never forget your family. The day you retire, God willing, you look to your left and right and your wife and your kids are standing right there with you. Don't ever forget that." I have a saying: "I never sacrificed my family for my career, but my family has sacrificed for my career." I think we are all in that boat if you wear the uniform; you have to understand at the end of the day your kid only graduates once from high school. Your child is only born one time. Your daughter only has one 16th birthday. Those are important moments in your life you will never get back if you miss them. Giving the current ops tempo we have, some folks had to miss those because the mission is important.

If you are all work, I don't think you are the rounded Airman that we need. You have got to have balance to be able to deal with the stress — both the mental stress and the physical stress. I try to keep everything in perspective, knowing each of the pillars: family, work and, for me personally, spiritual, is very important. If any of those get out of whack, I am probably not performing as well as I could.

HH: Why did you look up to your mentor as a young captain?

BG Mordente: When I was in the desert, my command chief was giving a talk and said, "If you could take every successful Airman and put them under a black light, you would see them covered in fingerprints. It's the fingerprints of all the NCOs, senior NCOs and officers in that Airman's life." I have been very fortunate in my career to have both senior NCOs and officers who have, for whatever reason, looked at me and said, "Hey Mordente isn't that bad," and given me an opportunity. Every successful Airman did not get there on their own; they were mentored along the way.

I'm an optimist, and I'm one of those who believe most Airmen come to work wanting to succeed and wanting to do the best they can. When you take the time to mentor, the spark you see in the eye, the spring in the step, the motivation to work, is infectious. It spreads throughout. Being where I am at today is extremely humbling because it was not on my own; there are a lot of folks who got me where I am today. It's a laundry list of people who have made some time for me. Sometimes just a minute and other times more.

HH: Sir, do you have any final comments?

BG Mordente: If you are a supervisor, commander, first sergeant or chief, you're in the spotlight, good or bad, and you're an example. But I want to stress to the Airmen of the wing this mission cannot be accomplished without NCOs, senior NCOs and officers mentoring young Airmen, showing them what the Air Force standard is, how we act and how we accomplish our duty. That's what's unique about the Air Force; it's not just a job, it's a way of life. The military way is 24/7 all the time. A successful wing is one in which those front-line supervisors are mentoring Airmen and being a good example so our Airmen have a mark on the wall and a direction to head toward.

Garrison firefighters assist during recent floods

by Rick Scavetta
U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern Public Affairs

As Germany's Elbe River rose steadily toward a wall of sandbags, U.S. Army civilian firefighter Dieter Dörfler and his comrades stacked sandbags to hold the water back.

Dörfler was among civilian firefighters from U.S. Army Garrison Baden-Württemberg and U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern who mobilized to support Germany's efforts to combat floods following weeks of rainy weather.

If the water breached the sandbag wall, farmers' fields, animals and local villages in the neighboring countryside would be in danger. Swirling muddy water, filled with wood and debris, inched closer during the night.

"When you stand on the wall at the edge of the water that's coming higher and higher, you have this 'ängstlich' feeling," said Dörfler, using the German term for apprehensive. "The water got very high — more than eight meters above the normal level."

In early June, heavy rainfall in Europe caused rivers in Central Europe to swell. News reports said 19 people died in flood-related incidents. In Northern Germany, the Elbe River threatened towns from

"It was very rewarding seeing how excited the children were to see the new restrooms," said Staff Sgt. Marcus Brooks, 435th CTS electrical journeyman. "They even performed a ceremonial dance to say thanks. I almost teared up a little."

The MCF completed additional renovations to improve the school. One of the most significant extra tasks was the replacement of three improperly wired, and dangerous, electrical panels. By replacing these panels, the Airmen helped to mitigate the fire hazard from overloaded circuits, which lacked proper overcurrent protection.

"The work that we did at the school benefited the more than 380 students that attend the kindergarten by helping to give them a safer school environment to learn in," Shaffer said. "As we came to the close of our project, the school put on a short concert and show, performed by the students, to show their thanks and gratitude."

7th CSC Soldiers teach civil affairs concepts to Bulgarian CIMIC

SOFIA, Bulgaria — Civil affairs Soldiers with the 7th Civil Support Command and Bulgarian Army Land Forces' Civil Military Cooperation troops deployed to Afghanistan in the past several years to conduct CA and CIMIC operations, respectively.

From June 10 to 13, three Soldiers from the 7th CSC's 361st CA Brigade and more than a dozen from the Bulgarian Army CIMIC Company trained together to discuss, learn, coach, teach and mentor those same CA concepts to and with each other.

"CIMIC is all about people," said Staff Sgt. Mark Korte, a team sergeant from Company B, 457th Civil Affairs Battalion, 361st CA Brigade, who recently returned from an Afghanistan deployment.

Staff Sgt. Mark Korte, a team sergeant from Company B, 457th Civil Affairs Battalion, 361st CA Brigade, 7th Civil Support Command, shows where his unit was located during his recent Afghanistan deployment in comparison to the deployment location for Bulgarian Army Capt. Galin Ivanov Dobrev, commander of 1st Bde. Module, Civil Military Cooperation team, CIMIC Co., Land Forces at the Gorna Banya Military Base June 11.

"It is all about solving problems," he added, as he spoke during his block of instruction on district stability framework.

"We're going to be looking at the way the Bulgarian civil affairs or, better said, (their) CIMIC team does their everyday business," Korte said. "There is a little bit of difference between civil affairs and CIMIC, but at the same time, it's all part of one umbrella and so we're going to see how they do things and possibly learn things from them and they're going to possibly learn things from us. It's an interaction that is quite interesting."

Besides DSF, other topics discussed during the four-day event included classes on negotiation, working with a local populace and two practical exercises, one of which entailed the 361st Civil Affairs Soldiers role playing as tribal locals to simulate real-world negotiations for the Bulgarian CIMIC teams as part of a key leader engagement scenario.

Korte shared CA anecdotes and lessons learned from his Afghanistan deployment, while three of the Bulgarian CIMIC Soldiers, who had also recently deployed to Afghanistan for six month tours between 2010 and 2013, did the same.

Korte's unit was the first ever U.S. Army Reserve civil affairs unit to be stationed and trained in Europe then deploy from outside the U.S. to Operation Enduring Freedom.

Day One was a meet and greet session that worked as an icebreaker and set up the framework for the training exercise.

"Because this is new to us, it is very easy to take benefits for us," said Bulgarian Army 1st Lt. Milen Radanov, chief of section, CIMIC Company, Land Forces. "We will take (the) best of each style and use it."

Day Two of training for the Bulgarian Land Forces CIMIC unit included a class on DSF. What do you do with your weapon? Where should your interpreter sit during negotiations/meetings? These were some of the questions asked by the Bulgarians.

"(DSF) is a tool that we use in civil affairs so that we're able to better understand the situation on the ground so we can give our commander a better understanding of what is going on in any particular area of operations," Korte said.

"It was very useful training," said Bulgarian Army 1st Lt. Kuman Gerovski, acting company commander, Civil Military Cooperation Company, Land Forces. "It is important because it can help us to assess the situation in the current area because our job is to identify the source of instability and to try to affect it."

Gerovski graduated from the four-month U.S. Army Civil Affairs Officer qualification course at Fort Bragg, N.C., last year.

786th CES hydrates KMC with purified H20

The 786th Civil Engineer Squadron tests and analyses the drinking water for the KMC to ensure the distributed water is consumable for Airmen and civilians on base.

Ramstein's water treatment facility is the largest in Europe. Currently, it has the capability to treat 445 million gallons of water per year and supplies drinking water to a base population of approximately 20,000 military and civilian families.

"Our mission is to preserve and maintain," said Airman 1st Class Sarah Bronks, 786th CES craftsman. "We ensure that people can hydrate with clean water resources."

The KMC draws all its drinking water from deep wells several hundred feet below ground. The water is pumped from these wells, treated and then distributed to the community.

Ramstein manages four of these distribution systems in the KMC.

Due to the purity of the groundwater resources, testing is, for the most part, not necessary. Most water resources are chlorinated, which provides a measurable means of ensuring the water is properly disinfected.

All water collected by the plant has the potential to carry pathogenic microorganisms and is disinfected prior to distribution to members of the KMC.

"Adding aluminum or iron salt chemicals to neutralize the pathogens on the surface of the water helps eliminate the water by rapid mixing," said Staff Sgt. Roberto Requenes, 786th CES craftsman.

The water quality team on Ramstein works around-the-clock to perform maintenance and collect water samples all to provide safe and pathogen-free drinking water for the KMC.

"Tomorrow's success will depend on all of us working together to protect our vital water resources," Requenes said.

USA Girl Scouts Overseas play in the water during their field trip to the water treatment facility June 13 on Ramstein. The 786th Civil Engineer Squadron tests and purifies the drinking water for the KMC to ensure the distributed water is consumable for Airmen and civilians on base.

Luncheon honors wounded warriors, Army birthday

Members of the garrison's Directorate of Emergency Services hosted a "Thank You Wounded Warriors" luncheon June 14 at the USO Warrior Center on Wilson Barracks.

The free event was held to honor the ongoing sacrifices of U.S. military members serving around the world and to also mark another special occasion.

"We're celebrating No. 1 the U.S. Army's 238th birthday and our wounded warriors today. We want to give them something back for everything that they do for us every day. It's a day for us to say thank you," said Hans Zoske, DES Fire Department Kaiserslautern.

A member of the German army reserve unit hands Pfc. Linda Castillo a bowl of cabbage salad during the "Thank You Wounded Warriors" luncheon June 14 at the USO Warrior Center on Wilson Barracks.

This is Zoske's fourth time hosting this type of event for service members at the USO and this one was the largest he's ever done. The 20-year fire department veteran spent months organizing every detail down to the chocolate and vanilla frosted cupcakes guests munched on to celebrate the Army's birthday.

"I started off cooking some pizzas for the Soldiers, and it just grew on me. I met the right people at the right place, and we were able to work together to do even more for the service members. It keeps getting larger and larger," he said.

Lines of service members, families and community members stood in line to pile their plates high with goulash and noodles, assorted salads and German pastries prepared by members of a German army reserve unit. Guests also received goodie bags, T-shirts and other prizes.

"It's pretty nice. I've only been here two days, but they've really been great, especially everyone at the USO. This event is another bonus," said Sgt. 1st Class Edgar Cervandes. Cervandes is stationed at Fort Stewart, Georgia with the 3rd Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment. "Especially being overseas, it's nice to be here with others to celebrate holidays and special occasions like the Army birthday. We appreciate it."

Dawn Rysavy manages the USO Warrior center.

"I think events like these make a great difference," Rysavy said. "When service members come here they are looking for a home away from home. I don't think they realize how much the local community thinks of them. We are so honored to have them here and doing what they are doing for the country. That speaks for itself."

The event also featured music from the U.S. Air Force band, an Army cake cutting ceremony led by members of the 21st Theater Support Command Saber Drill and Ceremony Team and an autograph signing from Miss Rheinland-Pfalz 2013 Sabine Graf.

Zoske said he plans to host another event soon, but he has not settled on an exact date yet.

Organizations or units interested in hosting their own event can contact the Landstuhl USO center at 06371-802-4900 for more information. The facility is located in Bldg. 3759 and is open from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 1 to 11 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

said. "They're hungry for information. They want it, they're open to suggestions, they're willing to take criticism and learn from it."

While the Polish AE team was absorbing information, the three Ramstein Airmen also learned from their interaction with fellow medical professionals.

"Both teams benefited as each shared their processes for safely moving patients during air evacuation," Hettinger said.

Training between both countries is planned to continue to ensure strategic capabilities for NATO allies throughout the European theater.

Day Three was a Bulgarian-led and U.S.-observed practical exercise with a shura meeting, protesters and a simulated attack, while Day Four reversed the roles as the U.S. CA Soldiers assumed the role of local leaders from a simulated country dealing with an insurgency. Three Bulgarian CIMIC teams met with them to find out what the local problems were and to work out solutions.

"I think it's useful (training). For us it's very useful," said Bulgarian Army 1st Lt. Maria Stoiyanova, chief of section, civil assessment, 1st Brigade Module.

"Their (U.S. Soldiers') comments after the exercise were the most valuable thing," Gerovski said.

The Bulgarian CIMIC Company, made up of only 50 Soldiers in total, was just stood up in 2005, and it is the only unit of its kind in the entire Bulgarian Army.

"It was an honor to be in Bulgaria and to witness the genesis of this country's first CIMIC unit," said Maj. Tomasz Zaremba, operations officer, 361st Civil Affairs Brigade, 7th Civil Support Command. "We are the first U.S. Civil Affairs unit to train with them. Hopefully we can witness their progression over the coming years."

"They've welcomed us here with open arms, which is amazing, and it's absolutely been a joy to work with them," Korte said.

Hamburg to Magdeburg. Flooded rivers also affected Hungary, Poland, Austria and the Czech Republic.

News of the flooding touched Americans serving in Germany, as many have personal connections to the country, said Lt. Col. George Brown, U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern's emergency services director. The garrison received several requests from German agencies for manpower, he said.

"This was something we supported without hesitation. We are partners with German emergency services," Brown said. "We share this place. We consider Germany as our home."

By June 8, the decision was made to send six firefighters. Four went and two remained on standby. Others volunteered to backfill positions in the garrison. The deployment did not impact the garrison's firefighting capabilities or services to the community, Brown said.

Dörfler, Tobias Eichelmann and Christoph Himbert, all U.S. Army civilian employees at Coleman Barracks in Mannheim, deployed 350 miles north to Zeetze, Amt Neuhaus in the Lower Saxony region, said Tilman Holbe, assistant chief of operations.

Sembach firefighter Andreas Zell, a volunteer with the Technisches Hilfswerk, Germany's official disaster relief organization, known as THW, deployed with a crew heading north, said Daniel Riedel, head of Kaiserslautern's THW branch.

"He is a very experienced and high valuable volunteer of our organization," Riedel said. "He and his team arrived (in) Magdeburg on Sunday morning and started to work."

Volunteers came from all over Germany to help on the Elbe. Filling and stacking sandbags was tough, Dörfler said. But they kept things lighthearted to make the work go by, he said. Crews worked eight-hour shifts and slept on cots in a local fire station. A local company supplied food in a field kitchen.

"It's hard work," Dörfler said. "But we tried to keep it fun, telling each other, 'We'll make it. You can make it.'"

By Wednesday, the Elbe began to subside and the firefighters returned home. Local people strung up makeshift signs expressing their gratitude.

"A lot of the people from the village were saying, 'Thank you for helping us,'" Dörfler said. "It's a great feeling."

Ramstein's Family Advocacy Program and the Army's Family Advocacy Program have combined efforts to strengthen the means of promoting an emotionally healthy household. Both advocacy programs offer classes to improve family dynamics and ease potential problems that life can create for a household.

Ramstein's Family Advocacy Program has teamed up with the Army's Family Advocacy Program team to strengthen the means of promoting an emotionally healthy household around the KMC.

The joint advocacy's program offers classes to improve family dynamics and ease potential problems that life can create for a household.

"Our goal is to ensure that every military member and family has the opportunity and skills available to them to be the best that they can be," said Maj. Ellen Wirtz, 86th Medical Operations Squadron family advocacy officer.

Air Force and Army family advocates have joined forces in the KMC area to allow the widest dissemination possible for opportunities and classes that they provide.

"We have the same mission," said Carmen Schott, 86th MDOS family advocacy outreach manager. "We are here to prevent child and spouse abuse. With our partnership with the Army we aim to increase our audience size."

A road to bettering one's self can be difficult. However, the Family Advocacy Program will always match the efforts of those trying, Schott said.

"Being strong and resilient takes an effort," Wirtz said. "We ask the people to give a little effort and that their commands and shirts are understanding of their efforts to better themselves."

Ramstein's advocacy program aims to create healthy relationships and families. They continue to attempt to spread their resources out as far as possible to achieve that goal.

"We want to ensure that we are sharing our resources," Wirtz said.

By pooling both programs, the Air Force and the Army are able to cover the same topics without competing against each other for audience size while being able to prevent elongated stretches of times without classes.

To contact Ramstein's Family Advocacy Program, call 479-2370 or 06371-46-2370. To reach the Army's Family Advocacy Program, call 493-4331 or 0631-3406-4331.

Base access, visitor process explained

by Senior Airman Bradley Beaty
86th Security Forces Squadron

All personnel assigned to, working on, visiting or residing on KMC Air Force installations should obey base entry procedures, including Installation Access Control System registration processes and escort procedures for visitors.

All personnel requiring recurring, unescorted access to Ramstein must register their ID card at their respective IACS office or the visitor control center in order to be allowed to proceed on base. This rule applies to school-aged dependents of personnel permanently assigned to KMC Air Force bases, who must obtain a Department of Defense ID card at age 10. IACS registration must be accomplished by every ID cardholder upon arrival and assignment to the European Command or upon receipt of a new ID card while stationed here.

Individuals who forget their ID on base can be manually looked up through IACS at the VCC in order to obtain access to the installation to retrieve their ID.

If ID cardholders would like to sign in a visitor at the VCC, they must have a valid ID registered in IACS and proper sign-in authority. Visitors must have a valid passport, or German "Personalausweis," for a one-time entry pass on the installation.

Long-term passes are issued for up to 90 days. These visitors are required to have a valid passport with a stamp from customs documenting the date they entered the country or a resident's permit. If visitors are traveling from another country and did not receive a German custom's stamp, they need to present a copy of their travel itinerary showing the country they arrived, along with the custom's stamp on their passport from that country. The itinerary will be used to verify their stay in Germany is less than 90 days. If their status in country cannot be verified, Polizei will be contacted to ascertain the visitors' status in country.

Visitors must be escorted at all times while on the installation, and sponsors will lose their sign-in privileges if they do not follow proper escort procedures.

The IACS has been used at U.S. installations in Europe for years. Ramstein began using IACS in 2003 on a trial basis and was found to greatly enhance security for the U.S. military community by providing another effective layer of security beyond the traditional manual methods.

IACS stores all registered, archived and barred individuals and provides immediate feedback to entry controllers prior to granting access to the installation. This tells the entry controllers whether to allow entry onto the installation, detain, deny access or notify the law enforcement desk for further action.

Registration in IACS is also important because it prevents many of the delays occurring at installation gates. When a member does not take the time to register his ID in IACS, he will be stopped and turned around at the gate. When security forces are required to turn vehicles around at the gates, it backs up traffic, causing delays.

Registering in IACS provides security that is important for the everyday safety and security of Ramstein and all other U.S. installations in Europe, ensuring everyone who accesses their installations have been properly screened and vetted.

The annual Rheinland-Pfalz State Fair will take place today to Sunday in Pirmasens. Cities and union communities of the state of Rheinland-Pfalz, charity organizations as well as military forces will participate in the fair to demonstrate who they are and what they have to offer.

Entertaining programs with live music, dance performances, presentations and displays will be offered on 11 stages and in activity areas in the center of town.

The market of cities and counties on Exerzierplatz will reflect the diversity of the communities in Rheinland-Pfalz. It will display offers for tourists, traditional craftsmanship and culinary specialties from the different regions.

"We are looking forward to this great state fair, which at the same time will be the highlight of celebrations regarding the 250th anniversary of Pirmasens," said Malu Dreyer, Minister President of Rheinland-Pfalz.

POS ONE installation to occur at post offices

Mailing services for packages will be affected at the Northside and Southside annex post offices Monday and at the Kapaun Post Office July 1 due to installation of Point of Sales Terminals.

Point of Sales Terminals are replacing current Integrated Retail Terminals with state-of-the-art hardware and software, along with support services at all KMC post offices. The long-awaited terminals require a change to the hours of operation to help with the installation process.

Northside and Southside annex post offices will change hours of operation for the postal finance section to 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday. The Northside post office will have two windows open at 2 p.m. and one window open at 2:30.

The change in hours will allow the post office to start the three- to six-hour changeover process.

The Kapaun Post Office will undergo the same system upgrade July 1, and will adjust its hours to 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Customers are encouraged to help with the process by coming in as early as possible on these days to help bring new machines and provide better service.

As a customer, the Point-of-Service POS ONE system will provide accurate information about available products and services and have immediate access to many options and cost data to easily make informed decisions. The POS ONE system will also support finance clerks and the U.S. Postal Service with the most effective retail sales, service, reporting and decision support functionality that will enable a better overall product.

Finance clerks will receive timely and reliable information regarding new products and services and updates to policy and procedures. Managers and supervisors have easy access to performance data that enable them to make more informed decisions regarding day-to-day operations.

TUNING EXPO 2013 ... THE PLACE TO BE!!!

One Airman's journey to a brighter future

Airman 1st Class Trevor Rhynes
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

As a teenager, Airman 1st Class Michael Gray, 86th Security Forces Squadron patrolman, had to support himself. Gray had to pay for everything from the clothes on his back to the food he ate and even his grades.

Gray owed more money to his parents than he actually had, so at times he had to go without food in order to pay his debts.

"My story starts before I was born; my mother was raped," Gray said. "She never told anyone about it. I never knew why, but I think it was something she couldn't get through."

Nine months after she was raped, Gray was born and became the newest addition to a family that already had three children.

"After about three years and some issues my mother was going through, she was charged with child abandonment," Gray said. "She was dealing with a lot of problems, possibly because of her marriage and the fact that I wasn't her husband's child."

Gray was then sent to foster care. After living with a few different families, he was eventually adopted by the Gray family, who gave him his last name.

"There were a lot of complications that came with me changing families so often before I was adopted," Gray said. "I had problems speaking; I didn't like to talk unless I had to. Whenever I did talk, nobody could understand me."

When Gray began school, he was placed in an English as a second language course to improve his speech.

"It took a few years, but since that class I've been able to communicate better, and since then I haven't stopped talking," he said.

But for all the social improvements he made, Gray still had other criticisms to deal with.

"The Gray family didn't really know how to handle me," he said. "Maybe because it was the first time they had a son or maybe they didn't know how to relate with me.

"Whenever I was punished, I had to go to my room and write pages as punishment. For me, it was just life," Gray added. "They would give me a sentence that I would have to write enough times to fill 10 pages. Unfortunately, as a younger kid, I didn't have the attention span to do that, so the additional punishment would be to add five pages."

As the page count increased, so did the time spent in his room. Bouncing between the classroom and his bedroom made it difficult to form friendships.

As Gray got older, beatings coincided with the pages he had to write as punishment. In middle school, a friend noticed and reported Gray's situation to a teacher.

"One of my friends brought my situation up to a teacher after a presentation about abuse, and the teacher pulled me aside and asked me a few questions," Gray said. "I told the teacher it wasn't like that, that it wasn't that bad and we were part of a more physical household. I didn't know any better."

Airman 1st Class Matthew Gray, 86th Security Forces Squadron patrolman, shares his story at the storytellers' event May 10 on Ramstein. Gray spoke about his transition from having a tough childhood to becoming an Airman. The storytellers' event gave Airmen the opportunity to come together and share their stories.

At age 16, Gray got a job, which provided an escape from the abusive household.

"Eventually, when I was 16 I heard about a friend who couldn't get a job because she was a year too young. I went to the ice cream shop she wanted to apply for and asked for an application," the Houston native said. "I didn't know it at the time, but I spoke to the hiring manager who had already decided to give me the job because I walked there in the rain."

The new job added variation to Gray's routine. He now went to work, attended school and returned to his room.

"Around that time I joined a program called (Air Force Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps), which might have been the best choice I had made at that time," he said. "The program instilled different values in me. I wanted to look good at school and I wanted to represent my school by participating in the drill teams. Being on those teams taught me how to depend on other people my age."

In addition to those values, the program also gave Gray three different father figures to look up to.

"Who I was started to change. I was more confident," Gray said. "I was doing more things with my time, and with my job came some money in my pocket."

But what goes up must come down.

"My parents saw these changes in my life and didn't like it," Gray said. "They decided I was spending too much time away from home, so they imposed new rules. I had to pay for everything from my school uniforms to my food."

With these new restrictions in place, Gray found himself without much money. He started to get more hours at work to remedy the situation.

"My manager was OK with this, because she knew I loved to work," Gray said. "I was the only person who would take other people's shifts at work, not only for the money but (also) I didn't want to go home."

Gray's parents saw their punishment wasn't having an effect on him, so more rules followed. For every grade Gray received that was below an A, he was fined $50. This took a big toll on him and he didn't have the money to eat anymore.

His manager gave Gray the hours she could, but then Gray's parents decided they didn't like him walking home in the dark, he said. So, his hours at work were reduced.

"One positive side effect of me not being home was that the beatings stopped, and I took it for granted," Gray said. "I had a little more self-respect and a little more pride in myself. But because I had my hours reduced at work, the beatings came back. It knocked me back down a peg or two."

Fewer hours at work meant less money, but Gray's parents didn't cancel his debts.

"I didn't have money for food and one day my manager caught me taking food from the trash," he said. "She told me to never do that again and to ask her if I needed something to eat. She said she'd pay for it herself.

"After that incident she gave me whatever hours she could — before school, after school, weekends. Whenever I could be there, I was," Gray added. "At the same time I was going through all of that, AFJROTC was helping as well. I had good friends now, which is something I had a hard time with."

Since Gray was having issues at home, an instructor suggested Gray join the military. He called the Army recruiter to book an appointment.

"I decided to join the Army, but after talking to a recruiter, he said he wouldn't take me because I was a 'Catch-22,' because of my past," Gray said. "Around the time I was talking to the recruiter, my parents added another rule. As soon as I turned 18, I wasn't going to live under their roof anymore."

Gray didn't know what to do. The Army wouldn't take him and he still had to finish high school. His instructors pushed him to call the Air Force recruiter.

The recruiter didn't get back to him until the day before his 18th birthday.

"Since it was about to be my 18th birthday, I had to find a new place to live," Gray said. "Thankfully, another cadet talked to his parents for me and welcomed me into their home. They treated me like I was one of their own.

"Looking back on my life, I realized that the people I had met along the way helped me through my situation," Gray continued. "When something went wrong, they were there for me. I wouldn't have made it here if it weren't for them."

Gray left for basic training the day after his high school graduation.

"It was the worst graduation party of my life, but I'm OK with it because I wouldn't have it any other way," he said.

Gray has been in the military for just over a year. His past experiences have helped him communicate, work with people and build his confidence. That experience has made him not only a better person, but also a better Airman.

Women's club donates to charity organizations

The German-American and International Women's Club Kaiserslautern gathered June 8 for a barbecue to celebrate the success of their annual Pfennig Bazaar and to present donations from the event proceeds to more than 30 organizations in the surrounding German and American community

In March, the club held its 52nd Pfennig Bazaar, known as the biggest flea market in the West Palatinate. Its name originates from the former German currency — the Deutsch Mark and Pfennigs (today, euro and cents). The Pfennig Bazaar is the club's biggest fundraising event each year. Proceeds are donated to regional welfare projects and charitable organizations supporting the local community. As a member of the Federation of German-American Clubs, GAIWC also sponsors German-American youth activities and university-level student exchange programs.

The German-American and International Women's Club Kaiserslautern donated €27,750 from the proceeds of their annual Pfennig Bazaar in March to various charity organizations.

After this year's Pfennig Bazaar, donation requests were reviewed by the club's board of directors, with donations then approved by the club members at their annual meeting in May. During the recent barbecue, American club president Katie Pelletier and German club vice president Heinke Balzulat presented € 27,750 in donation proceeds from the Pfennig Bazaar to 22 German social and cultural organizations in the region, as well as nine American organizations supporting the KMC. Through its Pfennig Bazaar proceeds, GAIWC also supports the youth and student exchange programs of the Federation of German-American Clubs (www.vdac.de), of which GAIWC is one of nearly 30 member clubs.

"Remaining funds are reserved for club programs and events throughout the year, including sponsorship of many cultural, youth, and family outings," Pelletier said.

A registered German non-profit organization, GAIWC of Kaiserslautern was established in 1956 to foster German-American friendship and promote cultural understanding. Since then, other nationalities have been welcomed into the club, and the name started carrying the word "international" as well.

GAIWC members meet monthly in various interest groups, including conversation and literature groups, a toddler playgroup, cultural outings, traditional dinners and other gatherings. Other programs sponsored by GAIWC include German-American Day events and the upkeep of and annual ceremony honoring the American children's graves in Kaiserslautern.

For more information or to get involved, contact Pelletier at president@gaiwc.com or 06383-9266018, or visit www.gaiwc.com. For upcoming youth events, contact GAIWC youth chairwoman Ulrike Näumann at youthchair@gaiwc.com or 0170-9662583.

Teen center offers teens options during summer

86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Members of the KMC's younger community can visit the Ramstein and Vogelweh teen centers for various activities and programs now that school's out.

The teen center is open to teens aged 13 to 18 and offers them a place to hang out, watch movies, play video games or use the computer lab.

"During the school year, students have the regular recreational programs, and we also have various enrichment programs," said Mona Hamilton, 86th Force Support Squadron youth programs director. "We also have two main programs, one of which is the Keystone Club, which provides leadership opportunities. We are youth development professionals, so in addition to the fun things, we do also help develop the teens."

The center not only has leadership opportunities, but gives its members a chance to prepare for future responsibilities.

"The programs we offer help students transition into adulthood," Hamilton said. "In our enrichment programs they learn how to fill out resumes, how to look for scholarships and learn about how to better themselves through volunteering and health and wellness programs."

Teens continue coming to the center because of the things it offers.

"I've been coming here for three months," said Ashley Long, daughter of Master Sgt. Michael Long, 2nd Air Postal Squadron. "I keep coming back because my friends come here and because all the different things they offer here."

These programs are facilitated by the employees at the teen center, all of whom use their different backgrounds to help teens.

"I really enjoy working here. It's a challenge," said Jordan Parran, 86th FSS teen program lead. "Teens have a unique perspective, and it challenges how you think."

Damian and Shelby Burns, sons of Tech. Sgt. Cherie Burns, 786th Force Support Squadron, play table tennis at the teen center June 12 on Ramstein. The teen center offers teens a variety of programs and recreational activities.

With more than a year's worth of experience, the memory that sticks out to Parran the most is that of two seniors who thought they were headed toward failure and felt they had no options.

"These two seniors went most of the year thinking they would fail. They would come to me and talk about how they could improve and other things they could do," she said. "Toward the end of the school year, they both ended up finding out they were accepted into four-year universities."

The Ramstein and Vogelweh teen centers are open from 3 to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 3 to 10 p.m. on Friday. The Ramstein Teen Center is also open from 3 to 10 p.m. Saturdays.

Lichtenberg Castle hosts medieval market

by Petra Lessoing
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Lichtenberg Castle will let the Middle Ages revive itself with a medieval summer market Saturday and Sunday.

For the seventh time, vendors and actors in medieval costumes will present how life was in former times.

The stands and tents will be set up like in the Middle Ages, and the food specialties won't include fast food.

Knights will demonstrate show fights in their camps. Craftsmen will present old skills, such as blacksmithing, shoemaking and broom making. Vendors will sell merchandise, such as clothes, jewelry, swords, horns, soap and felt items.

Jugglers and fire-eaters will entertain visitors and music groups will perform medieval music on unique instruments. Visitors can test archery and crossbow shooting.

Marksmen will officially start the medieval market with 12 cannon shoots at 2 p.m. Saturday.

A fire show with a soldier group and a dancer is scheduled for 9 p.m.

On Sunday, the event will be from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. A falconer will show off birds of prey at noon.

Children can have their faces painted and take rides on donkeys or in a hand-driven merry-go-round.

A RUN FOR THEIR MONEY

by Senior Airman Caitlin Guinazu
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Sick, injured and far from home, many wounded warriors pass through Landstuhl Regional Medical Center during their transition from deployed locations to the states.

In a flurry of doctors, nurses and medical personnel, is a program sponsored by the American Red Cross that helps bring morale and a smile to those in need.

The program is called the morale cart. Traveling the halls of LRMC, the cart is staffed by local volunteers and is stocked with items such as toiletries, snacks, drinks, movies, books, magazines and handmade blankets.

"When you can't move from your bed, keeping your mind occupied and busy is important," said Emily Hayes, KMC American Red Cross assistant station manager. "I can't overstate what a difference this makes to our patients and the wounded warriors here."

The morale cart is a donation supported project. One donation came from Ramstein in the form of the "Help a Hero" 5K event.

"The 'Help a Hero' 5K is an important event, not just for the Wounded Warrior Project and Red Cross, but also for the KMC," Hayes said. "The proceeds from the event are going directly toward our Landstuhl American Red Cross morale program, which benefits our wounded warriors and patients here at LRMC."

Last year's 5K was hosted at the South Side fitness center and raised more than $1,200 in donations.

"We saw how appreciated and popular it was. That's the reason why we're having it again," said Nicol Gecewich, 786th Force Support Squadron programming specialist. "It's such a good event for such a great cause."

The "Help a Hero" 5K event is a prime example of Airmen, families and communities joining together to raise funds for the Wounded Warrior Project.

"There's something about that 'taste of home' that brings comfort to these warriors," said Brittany Kelly, LRMC American Red Cross field office coordinator. "We wouldn't be able to provide that 'taste of home' without events and donations like this 'Help a Hero' 5K. Even simple things like a notebook or a crossword puzzle make an enormous impact."

The next 5K is scheduled for July 2.
