Exercise Saber Strike 2012 comes to a close

Soldiers representing eight nations stand in formation for the Tapa Estonia closing ceremony for Saber Strike 2012. The exercise, led by U.S. Army Europe, is designed to enhance joint and combined interoperability between the U.S. Army and partner nations, and will help prepare participants to operate successfully in a joint, multinational, interagency, integrated environment.

After two weeks of intense training, about 2,000 troops from eight nations began to pack up and head home from five locations spread across Estonia and Latvia as exercise Saber Strike 2012 came to an official close following ceremonies in Tapa, Estonia and Adazi, Latvia. The troops left having made new friends, learned new techniques and developed the confidence needed to better operate together in upcoming deployments to Afghanistan.

"Saber Strike 2012 has been a tremendous success strategically, operationally and tactically," said Brig. Gen. Mark Hendrix, deputy commanding general of the U.S. Army's 21st Theater Sustainment Command and acting exercise co-director, during closing comments in Adazi, Latvia. "We have improved our interoperability, refined our tactics, techniques and procedures, and most of all, prepared those of you who will soon go into harm's way."

Saber Strike 2012 is a multinational, tactical field training exercise that involves personnel from the U.S. Army's 2nd Cavalry Regiment, Pennsylvania National Guard, 21st Theater Sustainment Command, the 4th U.S. Marine Division, the 127th Wing of the Michigan Air National Guard, Estonian, Latvian, and Lithuanian armed forces, with contingents from Canada, Finland, France and the U.K. The exercise, led by U.S. Army Europe, was designed to enhance joint and combined interoperability between the U.S. Army and partner nations and helped prepare participants to operate successfully in a joint, multinational, interagency,

86th CS implements new PIN program

by Airman 1st Class Hailey Haux
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The 86th Communications Squadron will soon begin implementing a personal identification number program for all government telephones in the KMC.

"A PIN is like a debit card PIN, only you use it to make a phone call," said Capt. Erica Juchter, 86th CS deputy operations flight commander.

Telephone users will be given a seven-digit PIN they will dial before being allowed to make off-base calls from a military phone.

"This should only add two seconds to a phone call," said Lt. Col. John Zapata, 86th CS commander.

Once a person receives and signs for their PIN, it's theirs until they PCS.

When the PIN program has been fully implemented, phones within the KMC will only be able to dial defense switch network numbers.

If a phone call needs to be made to an off-base number, a PIN will be required. This PIN can be used on any phone in the KMC.

"A person can visit Kapaun Air Station for a day and use their PIN on any phone there," Zapata said. "There is no limit on the number of times a PIN can be used."

The PIN program is mandatory per Air Force instruction and is also fiscally smart, Zapata said.

"Everyone in the Air Force has been asked to look at how we can reduce our budget and it's important to target the things we can control," he said. "This PIN program is one way we can do that."

USAREUR commander delivers Independence Day message

by Lt. Gen. Mark Hertling
U.S. Army Europe commander

HEIDELBERG, Germany — The Fourth of July is one of my favorite holidays. It's a celebration of our nation's remarkable history and a celebration of our friends, neighbors and community.

In the U.S., families and friends will gather for neighborhood block parties and hometown fireworks. Here in Europe, we have the unique opportunity to join our host-nation partners, share in festivities with our community, and demonstrate the pride and patriotism we have for our great nation and our Army.

These holiday celebrations remind us that our Army communities — our families — are the foundation of our success. As we highlight USAREUR's Campaign Plan, we take care of our people as they arrive and when they leave, we provide healthy working environments, support services, and facilities, while ensuring we meet or exceed standards.

During our nation's birthday, I'm reminded of two Army values that epitomize our special Army community: loyalty and respect. Throughout USAREUR, there are thousands of examples of Soldiers, families and civilians living those values as they come together and help each other out. Whether it's being there to pick up a new family at the airport on their arrival in country, to going above and beyond in caring for a Soldier during deployment, our loyalty to one another is unmatched.

We also can't forget the host nation communities that take care of us when we deploy and provide opportunities for every member of the USAREUR family to grow and broaden their cultural experiences. A few weeks ago, we celebrated the 70th birthday of USAREUR and the official naming of our new headquarters, "The Shali Center," at Wiesbaden's Clay Kaserne. As we unveiled our new command center and ushered in the next era of U.S. Army Europe, we again realized that trust cannot be built overnight; that is one of the reasons we remain here. The respect that we have for our host nations will only continue to grow, and our past experiences together will never be forgotten.

Have a terrific Independence Day, relish in being an American and adhering to our Army's values, and enjoy a safe holiday.

Strong Soldiers, Strong Teams!

Safe summer driving: Are you ready for your trip?

by Senior Airman
Nicholas Perez
86th Vehicle Readiness Squadron

It's finally summer in Germany and the open road is calling your name. Before you hit the autobahn for a weekend getaway or take a drive in the beautiful German countryside, here are a few pointers to ensure you have a pleasant and safe summer outing.

First, you need to make sure you are prepared physically and mentally. Driving long distances can be very tiring and stressful. Even the most seasoned traveler is not immune to the effects of fatigue. Get plenty of sleep before your trip. While traveling, if you begin to feel weary be on the lookout for rest stops and take frequent breaks.

Rest areas in Germany are well marked and usually have refreshments. It's important you take a few minutes to stretch your legs, get some coffee or a snack, and wake up.

Getting adequate rest is important when preparing for a road trip and will help you to be alert for changing conditions on German highways.

There are many factors to be aware of when traveling on German roads. For instance, Germany is well known for its high-speed roadways, so even if your drive is just into the next county or wherever your GPS is taking you, be sure to travel at safe speeds.

> Summer traveling opportunities can take you all over Europe, but you are the biggest factor to arriving safe and in one piece.

Another thing Germany is known for is its unexpected change in weather. Sudden rainstorms can cause the road surfaces to become temporarily slick, which can lead to accidents. Additionally, the glare of the sun and fog can happen anytime and impede your vision. Also, wind gusts, leaves and debris can wreak havoc on your traction, and blind curves with narrow shoulders and shaded areas hide all sorts of hazards.

The summer also brings out more tourists, cyclists, tractors and horse-drawn carriages on the roads. In rural areas, traffic congestion can change fast making it necessary to brake quickly. Overall, being an alert driver is the first priority to arriving alive. An alert driver is also a proactive driver; being proactive will help increase reaction times to ever changing road conditions.

Furthermore, proper maintenance on your vehicle is as equally important as getting adequate rest and safely navigating road conditions. A few items to check prior to a long road trip are your fluid levels, headlights, brakes, warning signals, belts, hoses, and tire pressure and condition.

With distance, tires heat up and faster driving speeds increase the risk of a blowout. Be sure your tires have a safe tread depth for the road surface. It is recommended that you have no less than one-eighths of an inch tread depth for driving in wet road conditions and three-sixteenths of an inch tread depth for driving in snow.

In addition, tires should be rotated regularly to avoid improper tread wear. Driving within the speed limit is also good for your tires, and can increases gas mileage.

Summer traveling opportunities can take you all over Europe, but you are the biggest factor to arriving safe and in one piece.

Your preparation prior to a road trip is the most important thing before getting behind the wheel. Focus on the road ahead and enjoy your summer in Europe.

the yearly phone bill.

"We performed a nine-month trial of this program in 2009 with 20 units and the savings on the KMC annual phone bill was over $100,000," Zapata said. "Those kinds of savings add up."

To make sure this program does not hinder the mission, units will be able to exempt certain phones from the program, he said.

"The unit commander will need to approve a list of which phones should be exempted due to mission requirements. The list will then be validated by the communications squadron," Zapata said.

"These exempted phones will still be able to make phone calls worldwide without the use of a PIN."

Many hours of work have gone into implementing the PIN program.

"There is a substantial amount of in-depth programming required within the base telephone switch," said Tech. Sgt. Michael Parrish, 86th CS NCOIC of cyber infrastructure systems.

In addition to the technical programming needed for the PIN program, user education will also be key, he said.

"In order to inform DSN telephone users how to use their PIN, information sheets will be sent to unit leadership," Parrish said.

Not every person in the KMC will receive a personal PIN, but the 86th CS is providing a way for everyone to dial off-base, Parrish said.

"Anyone without a PIN can contact their unit's telephone control officer to receive a control number. When the user calls the base operator they will give that control number to the base operator and be connected off-base," Parrish said. "Unlike the PIN, this control number can only be used once."

The 86th CS is implementing this program within the communications squadron first to work out any potential bugs and then disperse it across the KMC.

AF discontinues ITDY dependent travel, transportation allowances

WASHINGTON — Air Force officials announced a change to transportation and travel allowances for Airmen tasked with 365-day extended deployments, commonly referred to as an indeterminate TDY.

Graphic by Corey Parrish

Effective July 1, the Air Force will no longer refer to a 365-day extended deployment as an ITDY since there are definitive TDY tour lengths, officials explained. The policy change will better align the Air Force with the Joint Federal Travel Regulation guidelines regarding ITDYs.

Previously, Airmen tasked for 365-day extended deployments received entitlements for dependent travel and transportation allowances. These allowances included dependent and household goods movement during the deployed period. Those entitlements will no longer be available effective July 1.

"The use of the term 'indeterminate' when Airmen are tasked for a pre-determined maximum deployment does not meet the intent of the JFTR," said Col. Ken Sersun, the Air Force Military Force Policy Division chief. "We understand discontinuing dependent travel and transportation allowances may be perceived as the removal of entitlements; however, the Air Force must comply with existing JFTR guidelines."

Airmen tasked before July 1 for future 365-day extended deployments will not be affected by the policy change.

Other programs associated with 365-day extended deployments are not affected at this time, Sersun said.

These programs include the "three-day option" that gives Airmen the option to either separate or retire in lieu of the deployment, as long as they make the decision within three days of assignment notification; "advanced assignment consideration," which gives deploying Airmen an opportunity to request advance assignment consideration upon selection; and "24-month assignment deferment," which gives deploying Airmen the option of requesting a 24-month assignment hold, following their return from deployment.

The exercise began with STX lanes in Adazi that included six tasks commonly performed by units serving in Afghanistan — convoy operations, urban patrolling, base defense, cordon and search, counter-improvised explosives device operations, and medical evacuation.

"Saber strike 2012 has been a tremendous success strategically, operationally and tactically. We have improved our interoperability, refined our tactics, techniques and procedures, and most of all, prepared those of you who will soon go into harm's way."

— Brig. Gen. Mark Hendrix, acting exercise co-director

While the STX lanes were conducted in Adazi, sites in Estonia were conducting academic training in military decision making and operations at the multinational brigade and higher levels.

After a short break in which participating troops held sports events and visited local cities as part of a "cultural day," the exercise moved into its second week, when operations stepped up the pace a bit.

In Adazi, battalion headquarters, with companies from the five nations participating in the event, conducted 24-hour operations that included all of the major tasks trained during the STX lanes. This gave the participating troops the opportunity to put all of these tasks together into one major field operation.

Meanwhile, the training sites in Estonia put into action the military decision making process, and other headquarters operations many of them will have to conduct in future deployments to multinational headquarters organizations in Afghanistan.

"This is absolutely great training," said Sgt. Christopher Whims, with the 4th Marine Division. "We worked the day before with the Estonians and learned quite a bit about how they run their convoy operations. Then today we worked with the Lithuanians. It was just absolutely a great experience."

While the tasks and operations the troops trained in were very much the same tasks many of them will employ in Afghanistan, the real training value was in the ability of all of the nations to train together with the very nations with whom they will stand shoulder-to-shoulder in harm's way, said Latvian army Lt. Col. Gunars Kaulins, commander of the field training exercise at Camp Adazi, Latvia.

"When we have Estonian, Latvian, Lithuanian and all the other troops here, it is a fantastic opportunity to learn from one another," he said.

The Saber Strike series of exercises is set to continue next year with Lithuania as the hosting nation.

A genuine conversation about suicide

by Mark Heeter
U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern

"Do you need this card?" Lisa Velez asked in a barely audible voice.

"It should be normal," she said, when discussing the oft-perceived taboo topic of suicide and the Army's Ask, Care, Escort card. "Let's step away from whispering and have a genuine conversation."

Velez, the U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern suicide prevention program manager, said the time for a "genuine conversation" about suicide is now — at the outset of the summer months, which are notoriously the peak season for suicide attempts.

"We want to be proactive, and not reactive," she said. "We want to look at what those risk factors are and address those."

To keep an active conversation afloat, Soldiers with the garrison's Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program handed out crisis hotline cards at entrance gates on garrison installations June 22.

"It's about promoting those things that are going to help you take care of yourself," Velez said of the push for suicide prevention awareness and the cards, which contained the overseas military crisis hotline, at 00800-1273-8255.

She calls it a mission of one.

"If it's just one person that utilizes that number (on the card) — just one person that was in some version of a crisis — and reduces the likelihood that they're going to attempt suicide, that's a success," she said.

Spc. Cynetta Moore, U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern Better Opportunity for Single Soldiers president hands out a military crisis card, promoting the new overseas military crisis hotline, 00800-1273-8255, to Air Force Capt. Lawrence Anthony Smith II June 22 as he enters the gate of Pulaski Barracks. BOSS Soldiers handed out cards to people entering Landstuhl, Daenner, Panzer, Kleber, Rhine Ordnance Barracks and Sembach during the morning hours.

Chris Lavin, a counselor with the garrison Army Substance Abuse Program, said one particular command was there for a Soldier who had attempted suicide.

"They de-stigmatized it by saying, 'If you get into trouble, we're there for you,'" Lavin said.

"They were aware that this goes on, they were aware that we have to have immediate resources to put into play to protect the rest of the Soldiers that are affected by this behavior," he said.

Ramstein NCOs win AF awards

by 1st Lt. David Janowiak
1st Air and Space Communications Operations Squadron

Two NCOs at the 1st Air and Space Communications Operations Squadron were recently recognized as Air Force Information Dominance Award recipients.

Master Sgt. Larry Miller, a cyber defender (1B4X1), won the Air Force's most outstanding information assurance program manager award of 2011.

As the winner of this award, Miller will go on to compete against nominees from other services and federal agencies at the national level for NSA's Frank B. Rowlett award for individual accomplishments in the field of information systems security.

Miller leads a one-of-a-kind team of cyber defenders whose mission is to maintain the security of U.S. Air Forces in Europe's intelligence network.

Over the past year, Miller has been personally involved in the development of a vulnerability tracking system, named a best practice by Headquarters Air Force. This is the second year running that he has led his section to an AF-level award.

Tech. Sgt. Brad Claypool, a global command and control systems administrator, won the Air Force's most outstanding cyber systems operations (3D0X2) NCO of 2011. The GCCS is a relatively new addition to the 1st ACOS mission set, and Claypool has been an invaluable linchpin to the GCCS mission since it migrated to 1st ACOS in 2008.

The 1st ACOS is tasked with providing GCCS support to USAFE users and general communications support to USAFE intelligence analysts resulting in European and African theater-wide impacts. The awards keep stacking up for this niche squadron and its dedicated members. With only a sliver of the Air Force's total cyber force, the unit earned three of the 42 possible Dominance Awards categories at the Air Force level, with three additional winners at the major command level.

"We're proud of our members and the tradition of excellence that they have instilled in the squadron," said Lt. Col. Hugh St. Martin, 1st ACOS commander. "We will continue to recognize our foremost Airmen for their outstanding contributions and hope that doing so encourages the unit as a whole to continue that tradition. Miller and Claypool are deserving recipients and role model 'Comm Eagles' winning today's fight and shaping the future for our squadron, wing and Air Force."

Hand, foot and mouth disease

by Col. Evelyn Barraza
LRMC Preventive Medicine and Primary Care chief

Hand, foot and mouth disease is, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, "a common viral infection that usually occurs during summer or fall. Despite its scary name, the illness is usually mild."

HFMD usually affects infants and children younger than 10 years old, but can sometimes occur in adults. In the past two weeks, there has been an increase in cases in the KMC.

Although there is no specific treatment or vaccine to prevent the disease, there are simple steps that families can take to reduce their risk.

Signs and symptoms include tiny blisters in the mouth that begin as small red spots that blister and often become small ulcers. A skin rash develops over one or two days with red spots and sometimes blisters on the fingers, palms of the hands, buttocks and soles of the feet.

These blisters may appear on all, few or none of these locations in infected children. Symptoms of the common cold may also appear, including fever, and sore throat. The blisters in the mouth may make it difficult for the child to eat and drink.

The virus is found in an infected person's nose and throat secretions, blister fluid or stool. It is usually spread by coughing or sneezing, direct contact, and through exposure to the virus in stool. Covering coughs and sneezes and hand washing will help to control the spread of the disease. Respiratory transmission of the virus usually lasts less than a week, but infected children can continue to shed virus in their stool for weeks. It is also important to remember that some people, especially adults, can get the disease and show no symptoms but still spread the virus to others. The virus is not transmitted to or from pets or other animals.

HFMD is usually not serious, is typically mild and short-lived. Fever and pain can be managed by over-the-counter medications, such as ibuprofen and acetaminophen. It is important to drink enough fluids to prevent dehydration.

Children are excluded from day care or school only if they are too ill to participate, have a fever or are drooling because of blisters in the mouth.

Contact your health care provider if you have questions or concerns about this disease in your family.

Annual technology expo brings solution providers

The Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association Kaiserslautern Chapter 158 will host the annual summer technology expositions July 17 and 18 at the Ramstein Officers' Club. U.S. Air Forces in Euorpe/A6 will sponsor the expo with more than 70 vendors offering the latest in cutting edge technology. The two-day event, themed "Supporting Warfighting Alliances Globally," is open to all military, civilian and other contractor personnel.

"Bringing a broad range of technologies to one base and having it open to all personnel is a unique opportunity in which everyone can learn about technologies that can better support their organization's mission and ultimately support the warfighter," said Sarah Hoppe, event manager for National Conference Services Inc.

The exposition will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. July 17. In addition to exploring the vendor offerings, attendees can sit in on seminars that will run during exposition hours. Vendors will present on topics such as unified communications, cyber security, mobile computing, cloud computing and more.

The event will offer one more chance to speak with vendors showcasing technologies like cloud computing, data storage and protection, digital imaging, secure and scalable solutions, and battle tested communications, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. July 18.

For more information, call 001-443-561-2458 or email hoppe@ncsi.com. To view the most current exhibitor list and to pre-register, visit http://www.FederalEvents.Com and click on "Ramstein AB."

Mentor volunteers sought for DEFY program

by Morgan McNabb
DDRPM

Active duty and Department of Defense personnel are invited to join the Drug Education for Youth team as mentors, junior staff, health care providers and administrative assistants for Phase I and II of the 2012 program.

Mentoring is the backbone of DEFY. This is a free program for children ages 9 to 12 of active-duty and retired military or DOD civilian personnel. The goal of the program's adult staff members and volunteers is to empower the participants to build positive healthy lifestyles. Training includes team-building, conflict resolution and decision-making.

Adult mentor volunteers can sign up for the program's Phase I eight-day leadership camp, held from Aug. 7 to 10 and 13 to 16. Applications may be obtained from DEFY program coordinator Morgan McNabb. Completed applications are due by July 6 and can be submitted at Bldg. 2117, Drug Demand Reduction, or via email at morgan.mcnabb@ramstein.af.mil.

Those applying should be able to attend staff training from July 25 to 27, be able to participate Tuesday through Friday and Monday through Thursday, Aug. 7 to 16, and have approval from their command to participate. Military personnel are also required to be on permissive TDY orders IAW AFI 36-3003, Table 7.

DEFY focuses on building the self-image of adolescents and the development of appropriate goal setting techniques. Additionally, interpersonal relationships, leadership and teamwork are emphasized during the program. The structured curriculum offers education, skill development and physical fitness. The curriculum also raises awareness of the harmful effects of alcohol and other drugs, as well as the dangerous effects of peer pressure to join gangs.

The program is limited to 25 children, 12 mentors and five junior staff. The deadline for children to sign up is July 6.

Phase II of the DEFY program is designed to reinforce the concepts and training received in Phase I. Group mentoring sessions and interactive workshops provide positive support during the school year. Civic responsibility and vocational and recreational opportunities are also promoted at DEFY sites.

For further information, contact McNabb at 478-0996 or 06371-405-0996, or via email at morgan.mcnabb@ramstein.af.mil.

635th MCT supports exercise

by 2nd Lt. Chaz Deering
39th Trans. Bn. Public Affairs

RIGA, Latvia — The 39th Transportation Battalion, 16th Sustainment Brigade, has taken the lead controlling movements in Northern Europe for the joint multinational training exercise Saber Strike 2012 June 11 to 22.

The battalion sent the 635th Movement Control Team to facilitate the sequential movements of personnel and equipment from various locations in Europe and the U.S. to exercise locations in Latvia and Estonia.

The U.S. Army Europe-led exercise, intended to enhance joint and combined interoperability between the U.S. Army and partner nations, required extensive logistical planning, since the movements consisted of a range of multi-modal travel including rail, air, surface, and sea.

Sgt. Joshua Genzer (left), a heavy wheeled vehicle operator, and Sgt. Robert Brady, a movements noncommissioned officer, both with the 635th Movement Control Team, document cargo from railcars to assist with the redeployment and loading of the train following Saber Strike 2012 June 15.

Originating from two separate ferries in Germany, the training exercise equipment was loaded on to two trains and sent to Latvia. Once there, the 635th MCT ensured it was downloaded swiftly and carefully.

"Given the high cost of flying containers and vehicles, a large majority of the exercise equipment came by train. Coordinating the rail operations was certainly interesting. We worked alongside local national contractors, German customs officers, the Latvian Army movement control team, and Soldiers from the units sending equipment. Overall it has been a great experience," said Capt. Stuart Coleman, the 635th MCT commander.

Although most of the equipment arrived via rail, a small fleet of Stryker armored combat vehicles from the Pennsylvania National Guard were transported by plane to the Riga International Airport. The Stryker's arrival attracted a mass of civilian spectators who rarely get to see a C-5 land at the airport. The perimeter of the airport fence was lined with civilians and vehicles, some even standing on their vehicle to videotape the download of equipment.

"The gathering was almost like a show. I've never seen so much excitement over a flight that was not coming back from a deployment," said Staff Sgt. Angela Palmer, a squad leader with the 635th MCT.

Saber Strike is a training exercise for most units on ground, but for the 635th MCT it is a real-world mission.

"This isn't practice for us. There is no room for error, and we are expected to execute the movements without deficiencies," said Spc. Arron Gilbert, a 635th MCT movement specialist. By the time the last movement has arrived, most units breathe a sigh of relief, but for the MCT, this is just the beginning.

"No one sleeps until every person, container and vehicle arrives at its home station," said Gilbert.

German Polizei Corner

Polizeipräsidium Westpfalz

German Polizei checked on three individuals after theft from vehicles were reported on June 9.

Polizei secured several items that were stolen from unsecured vehicles. The owners of some items (see photos) could not be determined.

Anybody recognizing the items should contact the Landstuhl Polizei at 06371-9229-201.

Additional items found include cellular phones, one camera, one GPS and a bunch of keys.

Polizei remind KMC members to not leave anything in their vehicles when parking and to lock up their vehicles at all times. Otherwise, there is a risk that your vehicle is hit by thieves.

1st Combat Comm personnel named best in AF

by 2nd Lt. Glen Pfeiffer
1st Combat Communications Squadron

The Air Force recently recognized three members of the 1st Combat Communications Squadron as being the best in their career field during the high operations tempo of 2011.

Last summer's Operation Odyssey Dawn and Operation Unified Protector gave the squadron's outstanding technicians a chance to take their skills to the fight, where they proved they were more than matched for the task at hand.

Wing Chow, 1st CBCS, deployed to three countries in five weeks alongside uniformed Airmen to coordinate the activation of tactical communication sites for OOD/OUP. She is on her way to earning the Air Force's Information Dominance Outstanding Civilian Award. Working in the NATO Combined Air and Space Operations Center, she played a vital role in providing C4 capabilities to all 23 countries involved.

"I was lucky enough to be in the right place at the right time ... the men and women of our armed forces do amazing things everyday and it is an honor to work with them," Chow said. "Any achievement I have made is only a reflection of a much larger team. I love what I do."

Her duties at Ramstein prepared her for the challenges she faced. While in-garrison, Chow served as lead technical adviser for Airmen operating deployed networks in 18 other nations. Senior Airman Johnny Laster was one of those combat communications Airmen who spent time abroad, deploying to three countries in 2011. The Air Force named him Outstanding Client Systems Airman – the top 3D1X1 Airman in the cyber arsenal.

That title was earned in part by playing a vital role in providing communications capabilities to the flying, intelligence and medical communities during OOD/OUP. Laster's skills and expertise while in-garrison were invaluable for ensuring equipment was not only ready to go out the door, but was fully upgraded, tested and advertised to those who may need to utilize the squadron's capabilities.

Of course, none of the communications equipment would be useful without electricity, and so 1st CBCS is proud to have Tech. Sgt. Brian Kaufman as a section chief in the power production element of the squadron. The Air Force named Kaufman as an Air Force power professional leader for his efforts leading work centers that drove support to 15 nations in five COCOMs during the squadron's highest operations tempo since the invasion of Iraq.

He served as the chief of a tactical communications mission that enabled nearly 10,000 strike sorties against Libya.

"I knew that if I was to fail, others could be hurt for my mistakes'" Kaufman said. "That meant everything I did needed to be done 110 percent. Many times, my leadership told me that whatever decision I made, they would stand behind. It was great knowing that."

1st CMXS decommissions HF comm equipment, saves AF $5M

by the 1st Communications Maintenance Squadron

In early spring 2011, the 1st Communications Maintenance Squadron was tasked with removing 21 high-frequency antenna systems located at Royal Air Force Croughton and Barford St. John.

RAF Croughton is a U.S. Air Force communications base in Northamptonshire, England. It is home to the 422nd Air Base Group and operates one of Europe's largest scope command HF antenna sites and military switchboards, processing approximately one-third of all U.S. communications in Europe. The radio site at RAF Barford St. John has been used for communications purposes since World War II.

The decommissioning efforts started 14 months ago when Scope Command began upgrading HF global communications system antennas, in service since the 1980s, with less maintenance intensive systems.

The 1st CMXS dispatched cable/antenna theater maintenance teams between 2011 and 2012 for a phased decommissioning approach. In 2011, 10 HF antennas were removed, facilitating installation of five new antenna systems. Late this spring, the 1st CMXS was again called upon to remove 11 HF antennas and complete the decommissioning efforts at both U.K. sites.

In April, Master Sgt. Mark Malloy led a team of five cable and antenna maintainers and two vehicle operation specialists on a 30-day decommissioning trip. The team endured austere weather and ground conditions, working through the U.K.'s coldest spring since 1989 and worst rain fall totals in more than 100 years. The combination of hail, freezing rain and wet ground made for slow, sometimes treacherous, conditions for working aloft - frequently above 90 feet.

Upon arriving at the site, Malloy went over his plan of attack with his team and within two hours had the first antenna on the ground. The 422nd Communications Squadron's cable antenna work center took advantage of this opportunity to augment the 1st CMXS with three personnel, gaining vital on-the-job training while also providing additional manpower to the 1st CMXS team. Assistance was also provided by the SERCO Group, which transported and disposed of $306,000 worth of materials to RAF Molesworth.

"I was truly amazed when the team arrived and, within a couple hours, had the first antenna on the ground and began the disposal process," said Master Sgt. Steven Haro, 422nd Cable Antenna Systems NCOIC. "Even with less than ideal weather and ground conditions, the team continued an exceptionally fast work pace, which kept them well ahead of schedule."

Despite weather conditions, the can-do attitude of the entire team increased productivity exponentially, reducing a 55-day project to 30-days, saving $19,000 in temporary-duty costs. The team also coordinated turning more than 30 HF antenna support poles to local farmers to rebuild a bridge used for farm access, saving $154,000 in disposal costs and strengthening community relations.

By the time the team finished the project, they traveled more than 1,100 miles and removed one weather intercept loop array, two low take-off, three rotatable log periodic and five high take-off HF antenna systems. They also removed 42 60-foot antenna support poles and 800 feet of fence and disposed of 12.5 tons of materials.

The 1st CMXS, part of the 435th Air Ground Operations Wing, is a hand-selected team of communications maintenance experts that provide specialized maintenance support and emergency restoration for Department of Defense communications and information systems throughout the U.S. European Command and U.S. Africa Command areas of responsibility.

"This HF decommissioning team is a perfect example of the technical expertise and professionalism of the 1st CMXS Dragons," said Maj. Angie Freeman, 1st CMXS commander. "By having 1st CMXS perform this decommissioning, we saved the Air Force $5 million in contractor fees while paving the way for Air Force-wide HF system upgrades."

Retiring in Germany? What should you do?

If you wish to retire in Germany and are no longer associated with the U.S. military, you will lose your SOFA status and consequently will become a tourist. A regular U.S. citizen can stay in Germany for 90 days without requiring a residence permit. You will fall under this category as soon as you retire.

What you have to do is apply for a residence permit (Aufenthaltsgenehmigung) at the Foreigners' Registration Office (Ausländerbehörde).

If you live in the City of Kaiserslautern (city includes: Dansenberg, Einsiedlerhof, Erfenbach with Lampertsmühle and Stockborn, Erlenbach, Hohenecken with Espensteig, Mölschbach, Morlautern with Waldhof, and Siegelbach) then the office in Rathaus-Nord, Benzinoring 1, is the appropriate office for you.

If you live in Kaiserslautern County (county includes: Bann, Bruchmühlbach-Miesau, Enkenbach-Alsenborn, Erzenhausen, Eulenbis, Fischbach, Frankelbach, Frankenstein, Gerhardsbrunn, Hauptstuhl, Heiligenmoschel, Hirschhorn/Pfalz, Hochspeyer, Hütschenhausen, Katzweiler, Kindsbach, Kollweiler, Kottweiler-Schwanden, Krickenbach, Lambsborn, Landstuhl, Langwieden, Linden, Mackenbach, Martinshöhe, Mehlbach, Mehlingen, Mittelbrunn, Neuhemsbach, Niederkirchen, Niedermohr, Oberarnbach, Olsbrücken, Otterbach, Otterberg, Queidersbach, Ramstein-Miesenbach, Reichenbach-Steegen, Rodenbach, Schallodenbach, Schneckenhausen, Schopp, Schwedelbach, Sembach, Steinwenden, Stelzenberg, Sulzbachtal, Trippstadt, Waldleiningen, and Weilerbach), then you would need to contact the Foreigners' Registration Office in the County Administration (Kreisverwaltung), Lauterstr. 8.

You will have to provide the following:

• Proof of income (Einkommensnachweis). Submitting copies of your retirement pay is usually sufficient.

• Proof of health insurance (Krankenversicherung). If you remain covered through the U.S. system, then submit proof of this. Otherwise, you will have to acquire health insurance on the German economy.

• Passports and photos of you and each family member.

If you are married and your spouse is not German, the above items are also required of your spouse. You will also need to submit a marriage certificate, regardless of your spouse's nationality. It is advisable to start early on these things, however, as long as you have SOFA status, you cannot start this process. When you lose your status, you will be considered a U.S. tourist who just entered the country. After this, you can stay in Germany for 90 days without needing a status.

As soon as you lose the SOFA status, you should begin the process of applying for a residence permit. Make an appointment at the Foreigners' Registration Office (Ausländerbehörde). Call 0631-365-2245/2584 for the Kaiserslautern City Administration and 0631-7105-201/401 for the County Administration. Take the above items to the appropriate office. Your documents will be reviewed. There is no fixed time for the process. It can be a matter of two weeks or longer. Therefore, it is highly recommended you begin the process as soon as you lose your SOFA status.

Usually, a residence permit must be renewed annually. Also, you will not receive German health benefits if you do not pay into the German health care system through employment. Therefore, you will only receive a residence permit if you already have your own health care. If you do end up working on the economy, you will then pay for German health insurance, which entitles you to receive German health benefits. There is no specific job you will need to acquire in order to stay in Germany. Most retirees have sufficient income through their pension.

Staying in Germany with new electronic residence title cards

Over the years, retirees desiring to stay in Germany had to obtain a residency permit and, once approved, the local German authorities (Ausländeramt) would stamp their American passport.

At first it would be a temporary authorization to stay and if after three years you still desired to stay, you had to submit another application requesting permanent residency authorization, which was approved from Berlin. One would have to show income of sufficient funds to live in Germany and show proof of health insurance.

The permit to stay forever did not expire but had to be re-instated once your passport required renewal — after 10-years.

Now, you no longer need a stamp in your passport. Since September 2011, folks obtaining a "residency permit" will be issued a plastic ID card. The card is called an "e-AT," or the electronic residence title.

The existing residence title (sticky label), the residence card and permanent residence card, and the substitute paper identity card were superseded on Sept. 1, 2011, by the electronic residence title in credit card format.

The electronic residence title has a contactless chip inside the card on which biometric characteristics (photo and two fingerprints), supplementary conditions (requirements) and personal data are stored.

In addition, the chip contains the facility to use an electronic proof of identity and a qualified electronic signature. All European Union member states are obliged to introduce the electronic residence title. The basis for this is EU regulations No. 1030/2002 and No. 380/2008.

The aim is to design a uniform residence title for the EU and, by using biometric data, to increase the connection between document holder and document, and to protect these from abuse.

The Federal Office for Migrations and Refugees, an office of the Federal Ministry of the Interior has complied with this directive and it has mandated the issue a personal electronic residence title card for every third-country national, including Americans that are residents of Germany. Existing residence titles in passports and substitute identity papers will retain their validity until Aug. 31, 2021.

The electronic residence title will open up online communication with authorities and administrative offices for foreign nationals as it will for German citizens, and help to save time and money.

The use of the online identity functions (electronic proof of identity and electronic signature function) is voluntary and can be switched on and off on request. The new document will be produced by Bundesdruckerei GmbH in Berlin.

The electronic residence title is in ID-1 format. This is the 8.6 cm x 5.4 cm size you may already know from many other plastic cards encountered in daily life.

The body of the cards consists of several layers of plastic and with its optimal dimensions fits into every size of wallet.

This new document contains numerous security features that make it more secure against falsification. These include security printing with multicolored lined structures and microscripts, embossed surfaces, an integrated security thread and holograms.

In addition, you will now find the six-digit access number on the front of the electronic residence title. You can use this in the future if you use the on-line identity function and you have already input your PIN twice incorrectly to transfer your data.

To whom is the electronic residence title issued? The document is issued to all third-country nationals as a personal document.

The cost per card is around €135. Existing residence titles in passports and substitute identity papers will retain their validity until April 30, 2021.

Issuing an electronic residence title takes a few weeks. Therefore, you should apply for your residence title in good time. This also applies to applying for a new passport, since you will only receive a new residence title if your passport is valid.

LRMC ophthalmology, optometry keep future clearly in sight

by Sgt. Tina Villalobos
Landstuhl Regional Medical Center

People who do not require vision correction rarely experience the inconvenience of diminished sight except, perhaps, when having their eyes dilated during an examination. The immediate and disorienting effect of diminished vision makes us recognize the importance of our eyesight.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, vision loss is common in adults and prevalence increases with advancing age. Approximately 13 percent of individuals 65 or older and 28 percent of those over 85 report some degree of visual impairment.

In children, refractive errors are the most common vision disorders, occurring in 20 percent by age 16. More than 90 percent of older people require the use of corrective lenses at some time. Visual disorders in older adults frequently lead to trauma from falls, automobile crashes and other types of unintentional injuries. Many adults are unaware of decreases in their visual acuity, and up to 25 percent may have incorrect corrective lens prescriptions.

While the difference between ophthalmology and optometry is blurred for most of us, Dr. (Col.) Richard H. Birdsong, chief of Ophthalmology Service at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center, brings it into focus.

Ophthalmologists are physicians who, after college, complete medical or osteopathic school, then medical internship and residency training in ophthalmology, Birdsong said. Optometrists are eye care professionals who, after college, complete optometry school with some optional one-year residencies. Optometrists' primary roles are eye health and refractive care. Ophthalmologists perform all types of surgeries in addition to eye health and refractive care.

LRMC Ophthalmology's role is two-fold: to provide state-of-the-art comprehensive ophthalmic care to service members, their families and other eligible beneficiaries, and to provide laser refractive surgery to active duty members under the Warfighter Refractive Eye Surgery Program in order to make them less reliant on glasses for sharp distant vision.

"When Soldiers elect to wear contact lenses downrange (which is a punishable as an Article 15 offense), the eye can become very infected and vision loss can result," said Maj. James Hartley, assistant director for WREP at LRMC. "Downrange is not a good, clean environment to be wearing contact lenses. Sometimes people don't take them out and clean them like they should because they cannot wash their hands and so forth. This can result in having to be evacuated to LRMC for treatment.

"We are doing the refractive surgery here to make a better warfighter," Hartley continued. "Refractive surgery helps our warfighters by improving their overall vision, allowing them to see well without wearing cumbersome glasses that can slide down their noses or fog up — or if lost or broken can render a warfighter visually impaired. Refractive surgery eliminates the chance of a warfighter choosing to wear contact lenses against regulation, thereby eliminating all of the eye health problems associated with the wear of contact lenses downrange."

> Deployed service members in need of glasses, mask inserts or military combat eye protection can order their prescription through the Internet without going to a clinic by visiting https://g-eyes.amedd.army.mil.

The ophthalmology and optometry department play a key role in the LRMC wartime mission, treating the more than 66,000 wounded warriors medically evacuated from Afghanistan and Iraq the past 10 years. LRMC serves as the sole link between downrange care and subsequent care in the U.S. and in other coalition nations. As a result, LRMC is often referred to as a prism or center of the hourglass, receiving a daily mix of patients and diagnoses that LRMC then treats and triages to appropriate destinations around the world.

Deployed Eye Protection

The danger of eye damage or injury for military members are much greater than most civilian occupations and require appropriate precautions, including the use of eye protection. Many people take their glasses for granted or even find them annoying, yet there are others who have never known the luxury of clear sight. For those blessed with sight, protecting it is paramount.

"It is very important to wear your eye protection to protect against flying debris," Hartley said. "The most common injury downrange is caused by flying debris from explosions, such as IEDs. Sometimes it is a little piece of metal that goes in, and sometimes it is a huge piece that blows the eye apart. There was a guy who came to LRMC not long ago with blast injuries, and because he wore his eye protection his vision was saved."

According to the Tri-Service Vision Conservation and Readiness program, eye injuries account for more than 15 percent of combat-related injuries, with the most common causes being explosives or environmental, thus making eye armor an essential element of every warrior's battle gear. Deployed service members in need of glasses, mask inserts, or military combat eye protection can order their prescription through the Internet without going to a clinic, by visiting https://g-eyes.amedd.army.mil.

"I saw someone with an IED blast and it really touched me and gave me a sense of purpose and refocus in my job here at LRMC," said Anthony Hodges, supervisor of LRMC ophthalmology services. "I have been working in this field for 20 years. Typically, we would get cases of cataracts, glaucoma and such, but I had never encountered a patient wounded from an IED blast before joining the LRMC team."

Eye Health, Exams

Getting regular vision checks, eye pressure checks and periodic eye exams by an optometrist or ophthalmologist are important steps in eye health, Birdsong said.

Fortunately, LRMC has a team of experts on hand to provide regular eye exams and treatment when necessary.

LRMC's ophthalmologists have a total of more than 75 years of combined experience and the optometrists have more than 50 years combined experience. The LRMC ophthalmology department consists of 10 service members and 13 civilians. The staff stays busy.

"We did about 1,000 laser refractive surgeries in our clinic last year and about 240 other types of eye surgery up in the main operating room," Birdsong said.

Eye Conditions

The leading causes of blindness (although primarily age related) are age-related macular degeneration, cataract, diabetic retinopathy, and glaucoma. Some of these conditions are thought to be related to behavioral choices over time. This translates directly into making appropriate, healthy choices during youthful years in order to help prevent certain negative consequences later on in life. Age-related macular degeneration is associated primarily in those over 50 and among smokers. A greater number of Anglos suffer from AMD than do other races. The National Eye Institute and Prevent Blindness America report that research also suggests long-term diets low in certain antioxidant nutrients may increase the risk of AMD.

Cataracts, according to the National Eye Institute and Prevent Blindness America, may be the result of a lifetime of exposure to ultraviolet radiation contained in sunlight, or may be related to other lifestyle factors such as cigarette smoking, diet and alcohol consumption. Cataract is the leading cause of blindness, according to the World Health Organization.

Diabetic retinopathy is particularly concerning, given the epidemic of childhood obesity in America and its associated elevation in cases of juvenile onset diabetes. The National Eye Institute and Prevent Blindness America state that eventually, almost everyone with juvenile-onset diabetes will develop some signs of diabetic retinopathy because the longer someone has diabetes, the greater the risk of its related retinopathy. The CDC estimates that 10.3 million Americans have diagnosed diabetes and another 5.4 million have the disease but have not been diagnosed.

Glaucoma is an eye disease that gradually degenerates cells of the optic nerve. Once vision is lost to glaucoma, it cannot be restored. Up to half of people with glaucoma are unaware they are afflicted. The disease cannot be prevented, but with the help of your ophthalmologist there are steps that can be taken to manage and control its progression.

Age and race play a role in the onset of glaucoma. It is more prevalent among aging African Americans and Hispanics. Long-term use of steroids, eye trauma and diabetes may also contribute to developing glaucoma.

"I find my profession most gratifying when I can make a dramatic improvement in a patient's vision, particularly older folks, when they come in with poor vision and after surgery their vision is 20/20," Hartley said.

According to a report by the National Eye Institute and Prevent Blindness America, the annual cost of adult vision problems in the U.S. comes to approximately $51.4 billion.

We can all take steps to improve the long-term health of our vision while contributing in a very real way to the economic health of our nation, keeping the future clearly in sight.

Wounded working dogs receive skilled care

by Col. Bob Vogelsang
U.S. Army Public Health Command

By now, most everyone knows that the warriors in Afghanistan consist of both the human and K-9 kind. Military working dogs have been with service members since day one of the current contingency operations and will likely be there until the last. And just as the human warriors are regularly exposed to the many potential hazards posed by the enemy, so too are the dogs. Indeed, some MWDs have suffered serious wounds that require timely and skilled medical care.

While some units not under the U.S. Army Public Health Command umbrella provide the initial resuscitative treatment and stabilization of wounded dogs, definitive care is performed by USAPHC elements. Dogs wounded in theater will generally first be evacuated to Dog Center Europe at Vogelweh. DCE assesses the dog's condition and provides the appropriate treatment, surgery or other procedure for the particular injury.

Last year, four dogs wounded by either small arms fire or improvised explosive devices were treated in USAPHC veterinary hospitals. One K-9 was a Marine Corps dog named Drak, two were Australian (Kujo and Kuga) and one was from the U.K. (Tommie). Having the most extensive and sophisticated military veterinary care, the U.S. provides services to other nations' MWDs as well as its own.

DRAK

Drak and his handler were wounded in a vehicle-borne improvised explosive device explosion. Drak received extensive injuries to the area near his right hip. Pieces of shrapnel destroyed part of the pelvis forward of his hip joint and also caused soft tissue damage. He also suffered shrapnel wounds and burns to his rear legs.

Drak was initially treated by Lt. Col. Jim Giles, an Army veterinary surgeon in Afghanistan with the 463rd Medical Detachment Veterinary Services. Giles stabilized the dog's vital signs and cleaned his wounds. During that initial surgery two large, jagged metal fragments were removed from the wound near his hip. Shortly afterward, Drak was medically evacuated by the Air Force to Germany where the DCE took over his care.

Tommie, a military working dog from the U.K., was hit in the side by a bullet that went under the base of the tail and came out the other side. He was medically evacuated to the Dog Center–Europe.

Veterinary surgeons Majs. Jacque Parker and Kent Vince, along with staff members at DCE, operated to close the wounds. After that surgery, Drak remained in Germany to convalesce prior to his next trip to the Department of Defense Military Working Dog Veterinary Service at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas. Drak had a remarkable recovery, and he didn't need a course of physical therapy and rehabilitation. However, it was thought that his ability to return to duty as an MWD and stay in top condition was questionable. Drak is currently in San Antonio awaiting the outcome of a disposition board. His Marine Corps handler is also in San Antonio at the Warrior Transition Unit at Brooke Army Medical Center so they still get to see each other.

KUJO AND KUGA

Kujo and Kuga are Australian military dogs who received gunshot wounds—Kuga to the carpus (wrist on a human) and Kujo to the upper part of his front limb. As with Drak, each dog initially was seen by Giles in Afghanistan for stabilization and wound cleaning before being medically evacuated by the Air Force to Germany and DCE.

Kujo's wound was particularly problematic as it destroyed most of the small bones that work together to allow movement. In Germany, a complex metal external fixator was placed to keep the area immobilized to try to allow the area to heal. The bullet that hit Kuga shattered the bone of his upper front leg. After arrival at DCE, plates, pins and screws were used to realign the bone fragments.

After a recovery period, both dogs were flown back to Australia for additional treatment.

TOMMIE

Tommie is a dog from the U.K. Tommie was the luckiest of the bunch. He was hit in the side by a bullet that went under the base of the tail and came out the other side. Though he had some big holes in him, the bullet amazingly missed any important structures. Large blood vessels to the rear limbs, colon, pelvis and nerves were all nearby, but none of them were injured. Other than needing the wounds closed after being cleaned out and probably being sore for a little while from the swelling and bruising, Tommie happily went off back home.

Army veterinarians take care of military working dogs wherever they are. USAPHC veterinary facilities and staff are making significant contributions to the well-being of these warrior-animals. Training and experiences like that provided by the Veterinary Corps' first year Graduate Veterinary Education program help new Army veterinarians to be ready to respond to injured MWDs and other veterinary issues.

Ramstein Airman reaches for clouds, lands incentive flight

Tech. Sgt. Chad Thompson
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Many children have dreamed of being a pilot. They spend hours imagining what it's like to be in the clouds, defying gravity as they leave the ground.

For one lucky Airman of the 86th Airlift Wing Judge Advocate Office, this dream of flying became a reality.

Airman 1st Class Nicholas Fennen, a discharge paralegal, was selected to participate in the Ramstein Daedalians Aviation Incentive Flight program, which provides quarterly aviation incentive flights to deserving young Airmen and gives them the chance to live a childhood fantasy of flight.

This Katy, Texas, native might spend his days processing administrative discharge paperwork, but he has a history of being close to planes.

"My cousin and his dad were both pilots … and my uncle flew planes during Vietnam," Fennen said.

Flying seems to be etched in the young Airman's blood, which might also explain why one of his initial first-hand experiences with a plane came when he was young.

"My cousin owned his own plane and he would take me flying around the farm all the time," he said. "As a child I loved the feeling of flying. The take off was the most thrilling experience as a kid."

A Cessna 172 piloted by Lt. Col. Rich Radvanyi, president of the Coleman Aero Club, and co-piloted by Airman 1st Class Nicholas Fennen, 86th Airlift Wing Judge Advocate discharge paralegal, pulls away from the Distinguished Visitor Lounge on Ramstein June 22.

Lt. Col. Rich Radvanyi, pilot and president of the Coleman Aero Club, goes over the incentive flight route with Airman 1st Class Nicholas Fennen, 86th Airlift Wing Judge Advocate discharge paralegal, June 22 on Ramstein. Fennen was selected to participate in the Ramstein Daedalians Aviation Incentive Flight program, which provides quarterly aviation incentive flights to deserving young Airmen and gives them the chance to live a childhood fantasy of flight.

The thrill isn't the only thing he loved. As a child he could only imagine what the world looked like from the air.

"I loved and still do love to stare out of the windows during take offs and landings because it gives a totally different view of everything," Fennen said. "It's really a beautiful site to see all of man's creations from 5,000 feet up."

It's these early flights that gave him a thirst for being in the clouds and a way to be a part of something that was bigger than he was, he said.

With two brothers already in the military — one in the Army, the other in the Air Force — Fennen said the choice was easy when it came to joining the Air Force, because it could potentially fulfill his dream of becoming a pilot and a leader.

"The drive to become a pilot is more than just the flying aspect," he said. "The leaders of our Air Force are mostly pilots. I want to lead."

With about 15 months in service Fennen has already proven to be dedicated to the mission and a hard worker, which is why his supervisor, Senior Master Sgt. Frank Portillo, submitted him for this opportunity.

Portillo said in the 10 months Fennen has been at Ramstein he has shown a maturity and work ethic that normally takes time for a young Airman to develop.

"He started at legal assistance where he worked at scheduling clients and working power of attorney worksheets," Portillo said. "We felt he was ready to move up because he had the work ethic an attention to detail to move on and do more tasks that not all (Airmen) can do."

At the time there was a sole paralegal working in discharges and the workload was too much for one person, he said.

"We needed to pick someone who could handle the task and move, and (Fennen) was our first choice," he said.

Since taking the reins, Portillo said Fennen has excelled at every aspect of the job and submitting him for this incentive flight was just a small thank you for all his hard work and dedication to the mission.

When Fennen first heard he was getting the chance to fly, he said he was surprised to be getting the opportunity to fulfill a dream. But for a while it seemed like it wouldn't happen.

The flight was plagued with bad weather and cancellations, but finally, after about a month of waiting, he got off the ground June 22.

During his one-hour flight, Fennen took the controls of the Cessna 172 and performed basic maneuvers including climbs, descents, turns and even flew most of the final approach to the runway at Ramstein.

"Fennen did fantastic," said Lt. Col. Rich Radvanyi, pilot and president of the Coleman Aero Club. "This incentive program is designed to give these young Airmen a taste of what it's like to fly and show them some basics in navigation."

Radvanyi said a lot of work goes into keeping a small plane on the proper course when there are strong winds involved and despite the weather Fennen was still able to do well for his first flight.

"It was bumpy and a little rocky," Fennen said. "It's a lot more work than I thought it would be."

For someone who is only 20 years old, this young man has already done a lot. He has traveled Europe, has hopes of playing soccer for the base intramural team, and with the right motivation he may one day have his name painted on the side of his favorite aircraft, the A-10 Thunderbolt II.

"It was surreal to be flying over Germany," Fennen said. "When I was a kid I would have never dreamed I would be flying a plane over the Rhine River and castles … it still amazes me at all the things I'm accomplishing."

Altstadt turns into party zone July 6 to 8

by Petra Lessoing
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Kaiserslautern's old part of town, called the "Altstadt," will lure more than 150,000 visitors when it celebrates its annual Altstadtfest, or old town fest, July 6 to 8.

For three days and two nights, Steinstrasse and its side streets will be one giant open-air arena for musical entertainment.

Kaiserslautern's lord mayor, Dr. Klaus Weichel, will officially open the event at 7 p.m. July 6 at the Wadgasserhof on Steinstrasse. The Midnight Movers will then take over to entertain the audience. During the three-day event, more than 70 bands and artists will perform on nine stages set up between Martinsplatz at the bottom of Steinstrasse and Mainzer Tor at the top of Steinstrasse. Dancing and entertaining music will be presented on the stage near the Kaiserbrunnen. On Stockhausplatz, various soul artists will perform, and in the Kopp & Kraus yard, radio station RPR1 will play party music.

Vendors sell a variety of merchandise in the streets of the "Altstadt," or old city, during the annual old town fest July 6 to 8 in Kaiserslautern.

"The Altstadt fest will surprise with new performers this year," said Alexander Hess, project manager of the office for events in Kaiserslautern. "With the support of sponsors, we are able to present such a diversified entertaining program of a high quality again."

More than 80 national and international vendors will also sell their merchandise, such as arts and crafts items, leather goods, jewelry and clothes.

About 40 restaurant and pub owners located in the Altstadt, as well as regional associations, will put up booths and tables and take visitors on a culinary trip around the world.

The medieval group Die Legende will set up a medieval camp in Klosterstrasse and present show fights, medieval dancing, and music and fire shows.

The election of Miss Kaiserslautern 2012 will take place from 3 to 5 p.m. July 8 on Unionsplatz.

"In recent years, the fest was always a peaceful one," Hess said. "We hope it will be the same this year and everybody will enjoy it."

The fest is open from 3 p.m. July 6 to 1 a.m. July 7; from 11 a.m. July 7 to 1 a.m. July 8; and from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. July 8.

For more information on the program, bands and times, pick up the brochure in the Kaiserslautern Tourist Information office next to the Fruchthalle, in local restaurants or other official institutions.

Several streets will be closed to traffic. For details about the fest and parking possibilities, visit http://www.kaiserslautern.de.

Organizers recommend visitors use the Kaiserslautern night buses and regional trains to get home at night. Trains will depart the Kaiserslautern train station direction Saarbrücken at 12:02 a.m. and Homburg at 12:47 a.m. Trains to Landstuhl, Kusel, Pirmasens, Lauterecken and Rockenhausen will leave at 12:30 a.m.

Families enjoy drifting fest July 8

by Petra Lessoing
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The Otterberg forestry office and the communities of Hochspeyer, Frankenstein and Waldleiningen will sponsor, in cooperation with local associations, the annual "Triftfest," or drifting fest, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. July 8 at the Biedenbacher Woog (pond) in the Leinbach Valley.

Besides enjoying an attractive entertaining program for young and old, visitors will experience how logging and the drifting of timber worked about 160 years ago. Drifting timber is the transportation of wood on the water.

"At 12:30 and 2 p.m., visitors can watch demonstrations on logging by using horses and how the wood was transported on creeks through the Leinbach Valley," said Sabine Tie from the tourist office in Hochspeyer.

"We want to show this year how the cultural asset of using the working horse in wooded and agricultural areas is being maintained. The forest work with horses is a new attractive part of our drifting fest."

Children can climb up trees, participate in a duck race and watch the work of beekeepers.

A guided hike to the gigantic Atlas rock above the Leinbach Valley will start at 9:30 a.m. at the Protestant church in Frankentstein.

The hike goes along Frankenstein Castle, then onto a hiking path until Leinbach Valley to the Biedenbacher pond, where members of local associations will serve grilled game specialties, Palatinate delicacies, beverages, coffee and homemade cake.

The Biedenbacher Woog is located between Frankenstein and Waldleiningen. Visitors can get there by foot, bicycle, on horse, or in carriages. It is not possible to drive in privately owned vehicles to the fest area.

"We offer a shuttle service for a small fee leaving from Frankenstein at various times from the train station, Goebelsplatz, Alter Postplatz and Biedenbacher Woog," said Tie.

In Waldleinininingen, the shuttle stop will be at the parking lot near the cemetery. There will be signs leading to the parking lots and the shuttle stops.

For more information and directions, call Tie at 06305-71147 or e-mail s.tie@Hochspeyer.rlp.de.

WARRIOR DAY WRAPS

S UP WINGMAN WEEK

by Airman 1st Class Trevor Rhynes
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Members of Team Ramstein competed in multiple events for the warrior day challenge June 22 on Ramstein.

The 86th Security Forces Squadron took first place, with the 86th Vehicle Readiness Squadron and 86th Civil Engineer Squadron taking second and third place, respectively.

Teams participated in 13 events that tested their physical prowess, including a 1.5-mile relay, ultimate football, a bench-press competition and concluded with the warrior challenge.

"We worked hard to get here; some of us worked together doing CrossFit workouts, others worked out on their own because of our different schedules," said Airman 1st Class Sean Schmermund, 86th Security Forces Squadron team member. "Some members of our team had their own specialties like distance running, strength events or things like that."

Hard work helped bring the whole team to this point, he said.

"It felt good to win … our work over the past few weeks has paid off," Schmermund said. "We may not have taken first in all of the events, but we grinded through all of them to get to this point."

The day's competition was planned with one thing in mind — building morale and teamwork.

"Today's events were a huge morale booster," said Adriana Holmes, Northside Fitness Center director. "It gave teams the opportunity to compete for a day in various events, instead of sitting at your desk, being in your shop all day doing the same old tasks involved with your job."

More than 20 teams used the day's competition to build camaraderie within their units.

"These events remind us to never leave an Airman behind. I'm really good at push-ups and Teammate B isn't — I can push him harder, motivate him to do better," Schmermund said. "It's a good feeling knowing that we can go to each other for help in areas we may be weak in."

An example of an event that tested teamwork was the four-man dummy carry, he said. It wasn't easy to carry the dummy because the weight shifted while the team was running. Adjustments had to be made on the fly.

More than 30 volunteers, along with the participants, helped ensure the day went as planned.

"The volunteers helped with the various events. Each squadron was required to provide one volunteer, some units had multiple volunteers represent them," Holmes said. "We had over 20 teams for the 13 events. We needed all the volunteers to ensure things ran smoothly."

Warrior day began with all participants completing a 5K run around the flightline and ended with a trophy presentation by Brig. Gen. C.K. Hyde, the 86th Airlift Wing commander.

"There was a phenomenal turnout. I don't think it could have been better," Holmes said. "We saw a lot of friendly competition, which was a good way to conclude the day."

Incentive program promotes a healthy lifestyle

by Airman 1st Class Hailey Haux
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The Southside, Northside and Vogelweh fitness centers are offering an Incentive Program to emphasize total fitness and promote healthy lifestyles.

"It has been several years since something like this has been done," said Rachel Miller, Incentive Program director. "I felt like it is a good thing to do to get members motivated to work out."

The Incentive Program is available to all active-duty military, Department of Defense civilians, retirees and dependents over the age of 18 who are assigned to Ramstein.

"We are looking to promote healthy lifestyles," Miller said. "It's self-paced conditioning so it can be done whenever a person feels up to it."

To participate, sign up at the Ramstein Southside, Northside or Vogelweh fitness centers and choose one or several fitness clubs.

"There are several different fitness clubs a person can join," Miller said. "We have cycling, running, power walking, stepping, strength training and racquetball clubs."

She said members track miles or hours by keeping a running total of either the time spent doing an activity, or the miles they walk, run, cycle or step.

"For each milestone reached the person is given an award," the program director said. "We give away things like water bottles, towels, T-shirts and the big prize is the gym bag that we give away."

In the cycling club, hop on a bike and take a ride around Europe or go to one of the cycling classes offered, she said.

"Being in the running club is fairly easy," Miller said. "It is something that you can do at anytime, just be sure to track those miles."

The power walking club is similar to the running club, however, it's easier on the joints, she said.

"Whether on the elliptical trainer or stair stepper, you are burning calories," Miller said. "Keep track of the distance you have climbed to get yourself to that next milestone and earn yourself a prize."

Both the strength training and racquet ball clubs are tracked by hours, the more time spent lifting weights or playing racquetball, the closer a person gets to those prizes.

"We all need inspiration and motivation sometimes," Miller said. "We hope this program will help people take action to become active and live healthy lifestyles."

For more information, call the Southside Fitness Center at 480-0295 or 06371-47-0295, the Northside Fitness Center at 480-8085 or 06371-47-8085, or the Vogelweh Fitness Center at 489-7329 or 0631-536-7329.

The Five Year Engagement (R) — Beginning where most romantic comedies end, this movie takes a look at what happens when an engaged couple, Violet and Tom, keeps getting tripped up on the long walk down the aisle and the strain it puts on their relationship.

Starring Jason Segel and Emily Blunt.

Seeking a Friend for the End of the World (R) — Taking audiences on a humorous, moving and intimate journey against an epic backdrop of Earth's final days, "Seeking a Friend for the End of the World" is set in a too-near future where time at once stands still and is slipping away forever and explores what people will do and how they will feel when humanity's end is near.

Starring Steve Carell and Nancy Carell.

TRUTH ABOUT "ORIGINS" SEMINAR
(begins tonight @ 19:00)
29-30 JUNE & 1 JULY
Featured speaker: Dr. Brad Harrub from Nashville, TN
Location: Edith Stein Haus, Engelsgasse 1, 67657 Kaiserslautern
What is the truth about questions such as:
• Did humans evolve from ape-like creatures?
• How old is the earth?
• Is the Bible truth or fiction?
• Did humans coexist with dinosaurs?
We invite you to examine the evidence as Dr. Brad Harrub addresses these questions, along with many other topics.
For a complete list of topics, meeting times and dates, see our website at www.ktowncoc.org
[These lectures are free and open to the public.]

This family-run American-German guest house lies in central Puerto Alcúdia, 200 metres from the marina and beach. It features a communal kitchen for guest use, a bar, and a free Wi-Fi area. All of the heated, air-conditioned rooms at the Hostal Calma come with a private bathroom, as well as a safe. Some also have a private balcony, while a minibar is available on request. Guests can relax in the Calma guest house's common living room, with a fireplace. Free public parking can be found just 50 metres from Hostal Calma. The ferry port to Menorca is around a 10-minute walk away. The guest house's friendly reception can help arrange bicycle and car rental, as well as tours and trips. A garage for bicycle storage is also available. booking@hostalcalma.com

One-family-house for Rent A dream for every family Krickenbach - 15min to Ramstein Air Base, 10min to Autobahn A6, 15min to city center. This Manson was built in 1997/1998 with the concept in mind to unify a harmonic life together and to keep the quality of life high. The Living space of 5059 ft² / 470 m² is divided into 3 floors. At the first floor is the reception area with the stairwell to the second floor. On the first floor you will also find the large kitchen with 484 ftm2 / 45 m² including a tiled stove, makes cooking and eating together a joy. The other areas of the first floor are designed for the living quarters of your children with 4 rooms, guest bathroom including a shower and of course a large bathroom designed for children. The second floor consists of an 861 ft² / 80 m² large living room built in an open living style. Between the living room and the master bedroom is a loggia, (a type of balcony that is embedded in the roof and not extended from the building) directed south to enjoy the sun. A walk in closet including a dressing room with a gorgeous bathroom is next to the large bedroom. The master bathroom consists of marble and granite including a shower, bathtub and sauna. Outside in the 6436 ft² / 598 m² large garden area is a heatable swimmingpool with counter-current swimming. This house provides two roofed carports and two basement garages. The entire house offers floor heating, air conditioning, video-surveillance, alarm system and on request caretaking for pool and garden. €3100 schaefer@tps-kl.de
