The USO attached to the Contingency Aeromedical Staging Facility celebrated its 10th anniversary during a ceremony May 22 on Ramstein.

The ceremony included three guest speakers and a presentation in honor of the Michigan State Spartans basketball team, which played in the Armed Forces Classic here last November.

"I would like to thank all of you for joining me on this special day where we honor the 10 years of service by the CASF USO," said Konrad Braun, USO area director for Kaiserslautern. "It's been an honor and a privilege working side by side with the military organizations that help the CASF

Soldiers of the 18th Military Police "Ever Vigilant" Brigade cased their colors May 23 at Rhine Ordnance Barracks in preparation for an upcoming deployment.

The green and yellow streamer laden colors of the 18th MP Bde. are temporarily cased until its uncasing in Afghanistan in June. In the past, the unit's colors have also waved representing freedom at other conflict ridden times in nations such as Vietnam, Bosnia and Iraq.

During the casing ceremony, Maj. Gen. Aundre F. Piggee, commanding general of the 21st Theater Sustainment Command, encouraged Family members and the surrounding Army community by assuring them of the extensive training undertaken by the 18th MP Bde. Soldiers.

"You were challenged with everything from the most basic individual tasks like marksmanship to learning new languages and cultures and everything in between," said Piggee to the deploying Soldiers.

He later added, "The net result is that you are better prepared to accomplish your mission in Afghanistan where, as part of the Joint Interagency Taskforce 435, you will provide command and control of detainee operations."

Piggee also made reassuring

COMMENTARY

The potential to lead & succeed

by Lt. Col. John Frazier
86th Maintenance Group

The Lesson. Early in my life, I noticed there were talented, healthy, able-bodied and intelligent bums roaming the streets of my neighborhood in Philadelphia, Pa. I'm not referring to people who fell on hard times temporarily — I'm referring to people who seemed content to live their life as bums.

According to my adult family members who knew some of these people personally, they were brilliant thinkers or athletically gifted at one time in their lives.

These bums always had some unsolicited advice for us young kids growing up and we would listen. However, no matter how profound their statements, the fact that they were healthy, able-bodied, smart or physically gifted bums resonated more to me than the words of wisdom coming out of their mouths.

I thought to myself, "How does an able-bodied and talented person end up being a bum?" My mother explained that she believed those individuals she knew in that situation had potential to succeed in life, but they failed trying to overcome personal weaknesses or struggles. Over time, their private failures became public. Fast forward to the present, we all know or heard stories of a handful of leaders at all ranks and levels (military or private sector) who have failed spectacularly in public.

> How do I know if I'm a leader? I have to be doing my best (do good) and human beings have to be following my lead to accomplish something positive.
> — by Lt. Col. John Frazier
> 86th Maintenance Group

I can't help to think that those public failures in some cases were preceded by private failures — struggles in life in a specific area that was not dealt with over time.

The life lesson for me is: I am no different than the "bums" in Philly or those leaders who have failed publically if I am not able to obtain private victories in specific areas of my life to which God has given me the ability to succeed.

Do Good. Years ago, at a squadron commander's course, the commander of Air Combat Command told us soon-to-be squadron commanders he was going to give us "only" two words worth of leadership advice: "Do good." Taken literally, those two words are powerful.

Of the many leaders who have mentored me over the years, all strived to do good by being the best person they could be. In doing so, they inspired me. These leaders led their life from an inside-out approach.

By inside-out, I mean they established patterns of success in their private life. They overcame personal challenges and attained personal goals which, over time, manifested in extraordinary levels of public success.

Though "doing your best" is an overused and very basic concept, taken seriously and applied consistently, it is a powerful method to achieve the greatest good.

Lead the way. While doing "good" is the foundation for effective leadership, equally fundamental is actually being a leader. During my first tour as a squadron commander, my wing commander commented to us commanders that being a good person and being a leader are two different things.

> Lead the way.
> While doing "good" is the foundation for effective leadership, equally fundamental is actually being a leader.
> — by Lt. Col. John Frazier
> 86th Maintenance Group

He went on to say a good way to tell if you are leading is to see if anyone's following you. If no one's following you, you are not leading." In the days after he made this comment, I overheard some of my colleagues confounded over the simplicity of his statement and discussing the potential deep and hidden meaning. Maybe they're still debating it.

For me, his statement was brilliant in its simplicity. How do I know if I'm a leader? I have to be doing my best (do good) and human beings have to be following my lead to accomplish something positive.

Tough questions that you can answer for me.

What am I doing to be the best person I can be? Am I winning my private battles? Am I living up to my full potential? Am I leading others to do the same? As a leader, what role will I play in turning the tide of alcohol-related incidents at Ramstein? As a leader, what am I going to do to end sexual assaults in my Air Force? Who's following me?

function, and we will continue to support as long as the mission requires us to."

The USO offers a home away from home for the wounded, ill and injured service members in transit from combat zones to the U.S. The CASF USO has three employees and a variety of volunteers who provide support to the wounded warriors at the CASF.

"We provide everything they need during their short stay, anything from comfort items and home cooked meals to the ability to call back home," said Jessica Macaras, USO center manager. "We also have volunteers who get involved; they sit down and talk with (the service members) to get their mind off of what they've gone through." The past 10 years have been spent not only serving the wounded, but the members of the CASF as well.

"Over the last 10 years, we've served more than 30,000 people, which includes the deployed service members that make up the CASF staff," Macaras said.

Volunteers have been instrumental in the care of the wounded service members over the past decade.

"We could not have done this without our amazing volunteers; they work hand-in-hand with us at the USO," she said. "The volunteers also run volunteer only shifts for us on Sunday morning. One of the volunteers takes the lead and runs everything here."

Macaras said that without the USO the comforts visitors have now wouldn't be available.

"We are here to help wounded warriors recuperate. If we weren't here, all they would have is their bay areas," the center manager said. "There wouldn't be anywhere to relax, communicate with their loved ones, or simply watch a movie or play a video game."

Being the only USO attached to a medical unit is an achievement in itself, Macaras said.

"We are the only USO that is embedded with a medical facility. For us to be here for 10 years is incredible," Macaras said. "We work very well with the military, and it goes to show that we're doing an awesome job and it should be celebrated."

435th CRG, SFS, visit Azerbaijan to improve mission capabilities

by Airman 1st Class Jordan Castelan

Capt. Matthew Tempia, 435th Contingency Response Group air adviser and executive officer, receives a token of appreciation from the Azeri military April 16 in Baku, Azerbaijan. Tempia led a three-man team to conduct an air base defense and security forces familiarization event to build partnerships and improve mission capabilities with NATO allies.

Airmen air advisers from the 435th Contingency Response Group traveled to Baku, Azerbaijan, April 12 through 16 to conduct an air base defense and security forces familiarization event.

The security familiarization event enabled Ramstein Airmen and the Azeri military to discuss and learn new mission techniques from one another in a professional and cohesive environment. Previous events held with the Azeri military included airfield management, airspace management and base communication architecture familiarization.

"It was an honor to work with professional peers in the discussion of air base defense knowledge and the pursuit of improvements," said Staff Sgt. Matthew Meadows, 435th Security Forces Squadron air adviser and instructor. "This was an outstanding learning opportunity for all participants."

Air advisers who made the trip first had to go through more than 120 hours of formal training in a USAF air adviser sanctioned course. The course instructs Airmen how to advise fundamentals and how to provide strategic guidance among many other mission capability subjects.

Capt. Matthew Tempia, 435th CRG air adviser and executive officer, led a three-person team in the exchange of ideas and possible improvements to airfield security standards.

"The airfield security familiarization event was a valuable experience," Tempia said. "It aided in furthering our partner relationship with the Azeri military and shows that the Azeris are very eager to be an active member of NATO. Future exchange activities should only strengthen the relationship between the U.S. and Azerbaijan. We look forward to seeing more of the Azerbaijan military and their country's leadership."

With these partnerships, the U.S. military is able to familiarize themselves with the mission techniques of our allies and improve overall interoperability. "Security considerations are a cooperative endeavor by nature," said Master Sgt. Jay Peavey, 435th CRG air adviser and building partner superintendent. "I was very impressed with the talent and capacity of my Azeri allies and look forward to future engagements."

remarks to Soldiers and their family members by stating, "For the Soldiers soon to deploy please know that Col. Donna Martin, 18th MP Bde. rear detachment commander, and the Family Readiness Group, led by Yuna Deadrich, will continue to care for and link your families to the great work you are doing in Afghanistan."

"The entire military community is here to support your families, and there are countless resources available to assist," Piggee explained. "When you need help don't try to go at it alone. Reach out to other families through the Family Readiness Group. Reach out to community resources such as Army Community Service and Army Emergency Relief. And finally, reach out to the rear detachment leadership," he said.

The 18th MP Bde. Commander, Col. D. David Deadrich, also acknowledged family members by saying, "To the spouses and families, I thank you for the sacrifices you made during our train-up period, and those you will make during our deployment. Words cannot accurately reflect the gratitude of the brigade, the 21st TSC, and a grateful nation. Rest assured your Soldiers are ready and I have no doubt whatsoever that we will accomplish our mission and redeploy with honor."

Deadrich also addressed the military police presence here in Germany in light of the 18th MP Bde.'s deployment.

"Although the brigade headquarters is deploying, two full battalions comprised of more than 1,500 Soldiers remain and I am very proud of the hard work and dedication of the Soldiers assigned to the rear brigade headquarters," Deadrich assured.

Deadrich also encouraged ceremony attendees to think of the future.

"In nine short months, we'll be gathered here for a similar ceremony; an uncasing and welcome home ceremony."

New hours

The Ramstein Southside Express Shoppette has new hours: 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays to Fridays, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturdays, and closed Sundays.

SVC operational now

The Special Victims' Counsel will become operational as a new tenant unit on Ramstein today. The SVC is located in the rear office space of the Hercules Theater, Bldg. 2101. The SVC is being stood up across the Air Force to assist victims of sexual assault through the legal processes. For details, call the law office at 480-6838.

Deactivation ceremony

The 886th Civil Engineer Squadron Inactivation Ceremony will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday at Ramstein's Fire Station 1, Bldg. 2303. This inactivation will take place in accordance with Civil Engineer Transformation Guidance. The 886th CES functions will merge with the 786th and 86th Civil Engineer squadrons under the 86th Civil Engineer Group.

Info fair, town hall

U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern and the 21st Theater Sustainment Command are holding an information fair and town hall meeting Wednesday at Vogelweh's Armstrong's Club.

The event, which includes nearly 60 community organizations and services, will take place from 10 a.m. to noon.

Army leaders will be on hand to answer questions and address community concerns. Offer comments beforehand at www.facebook.com/army.kaiserslautern.

Blood drive

The American Red Cross and 352nd Network Warfare Squadron will sponsor a blood drive from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. June 11 at the Ramstein Southside Fitness Center.

Tax assistance

The Ramstein Tax Center is open until June 15 in the Ramstein Legal Office, Bldg. 2137, across from the Southside Gym. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays and Tuesdays, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to noon Thursdays, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Fridays. Taxes were due April 15. Automatic extensions end June 15.

Walk-ins are only for military members and dependents; retirees and Department of Defense civilian employees must make an appointment by calling 06371-47-1040 or 480-1040.

The tax centers on Kleber Kaserne and in Bldg. 3701 on Landstuhl are open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. For details, call the Kleber Tax Center at 0631-411-7688 or 483-7688, and the Landstuhl Tax Center at 06371-86-6334 or 486-6334.

Cake Shop closes

To standardize DeCA bakery services offered in the KMC, the Cake Shop operation at the Vogelweh Commissary will be discontinued effective June 30.

This will allow adequate time to inform customers of this change. Effective July 1, the Vogelweh Commissary will accept specialty cake orders provided through AAFES in addition to frozen decorated specialty cakes that the store currently provides. This is the same service presently provided at Ramstein and Sembach commissaries.

Online survey

The Defense Commissary Agency will run an online survey Saturday through Aug. 1, asking for inputs from regular shoppers, occasional shoppers and non-shoppers alike. The responses will be analyzed and used to improve the commissary for all patrons.

The online survey, which takes about 8 to 10 minutes to complete, is available on www.commissaries.com by clicking on the "take our survey" link or accessing the survey directly at https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/DeCA-Shopping-Survey.

Elimination of captain boards

The Secretary of the Air Force approved a change to the current promotion procedure for the captain central selection board.

The Air Force will no longer have a central selection board for captains and return to the promotion process using a "fully qualified" 100 percent promotion opportunity.

This is effective immediately, and the 2013 captain CSB currently scheduled for July 15 to 26 will not convene.

All those eligible for promotion in CY13 will be considered for promotion in June. Starting in CY2014, those eligible for promotion will be considered on a quarterly basis using this same process (as was done from 2003 to 2010).

Bulk trash pickup

Bulk trash pickups on Ramstein take place Mondays. Residents should place items such as furniture, grills and mattresses after 6 p.m. Sunday on the sidewalk near the underground dumpsters.

For more information, call the civil engineer customer service line at 489-7703 or the Ramstein Recycling Center at 480-4191.

RED HORSE ensure readiness around the world

by Senior Airman Aaron-Forrest Wainwright
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Rapid Engineer Deployable Heavy Operational Repair Squadron Engineers is a self sufficient heavy construction and engineer organization with more than 30 Air Force specialties.

RED HORSE is comprised of civil engineers, communications, supply personnel, medical technicians and security forces members, among others, and enables the Air Force to respond with highly mobile civil engineer forces, supporting contingency and special operations worldwide.

"The mesh of so many different jobs allow (RED HORSE) to be self sufficient and complete our primary mission, which is construction," said Chief Master Sgt. Mark Lewis, 823rd RED HORSE Squadron superintendent.

The 823rd RED HORSE Squadron is assigned to Air Combat Command and is an associate unit on Hurlburt Field, Fla. This squadron is one of four active-duty RED HORSE units in the Air Force. The 823rd RED HORSE Squadron is on a rotation in Ramstein, assisting European Command with contingencies and humanitarian missions throughout Europe.

"The majority of the 823rd is still in the continental United States and comes (through) Rota Naval Station, Spain," Lewis said. "From there, they will head to wherever the mission requires, generally in Eastern European countries."

The primary mission of RED HORSE units is to build bare-bases, support contingency operations and combat operations. Squadrons deploy together to support the specific operations at hand.

"RED HORSE units deploy as an entire unit unlike most of the Air Force, this way we can stay self sufficient," said Capt. Elizabeth Bostick, RED HORSE logistics flight commander. "I love being a part of RED HORSE because it allows me to do something that I usually couldn't be a part of — logistics readiness."

1st CBCS conducts training to prepare for missions

by Airman 1st Class Dymekre Allen
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The 1st Combat Communications Squadron recently conducted quarterly proficiency training that ensures their Airmen are prepared for real-world missions.

This Phase, called "Healthy Star," is where the 1st CBCS conducts field training. In this phase they validate their skills through planning, deploying and operating tactical communications equipment.

"Healthy Star is our current operation and one of our most important," said Maj. Brian Carpenter, 1st CBCS director of operations. "It removes the element of comfort and allows the team to practice their mission in difficult training scenarios."

Phase one was the previous training that was conducted in equipment garages that are protected from weather. This is where the team becomes familiar with the main objective of their operations. They set up a complete communications system after each member of the team has qualified through flight-level training.

"It's crucial to our mission," Carpenter said. "Preparing our Airmen by not only ensuring they are capable but also ensuring they are efficient in what they do."

Phase three is "Healthy Thunder," which will be conducted in June. It is a field exercise similar to "Healthy Star" but includes core readiness training elements.

"We put them in a deployed environment where they must self-sustain their communications, living facilities and safety so they can test their own abilities," Carpenter said.

The 1st CBCS looks to concentrate on three areas that are critical to the success of any mission or exercise: security, safety and readiness.

The lessons they learned from prior operational readiness exercises has helped to improve mission capabilities today.

During the training Airmen were able to practice providing secure voice calls, DSN, secure video teleconferencing, NIPR, SIPR, land mobile radio and air-to-ground radio assets, which enable the deployed commander with command and control over the area of operation.

"This training means a lot," said Chief Master Sgt. Phillip Hudson, 1st CBCS superintendent. "It's the mid-point to finding out if Airmen are capable enough to be certified for wartime deployments."

The 1st CBCS looks to continue conducting training to assist 3rd Air Force in developing contingency plans for future operations.

One Airman's story of dealing with PTSD

Airman 1st Class
Trevor Rhynes
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

There are two moments in Staff. Sgt. Dan Scarola's life that make him the person he is today. The first moment was the morning of Sept. 11, 2001, when the World Trade Center towers fell. The other was a year and a half later, when he found out his mother had breast cancer.

Scarola, a 435th Security Forces Squadron unit deployment manager, grew up 15 minutes from Ground Zero. Many of his family friends were first responders. One of those heroes was close enough to Scarola for him to consider the man an uncle.

That man was one of the first responder on scene, and Scarola found out later he died during the 9/11 attacks."He was my father's hockey coach who would volunteer at the fire department on his off days," Scarola said. "He was the 11th man on scene at ground zero when he was killed. That's the first moment that defines who I am today." A year and a half later, in 2003, Scarola and his brother were playing video games when their father came in with disheartening news.

"Our father came into our room, turned the TV off and told us that our mom was still at the hospital," Scarola said. "She was ... diagnosed with breast cancer. We broke down into tears and didn't know what to do or think. I just wanted to find her, to hug and kiss her, and to tell her everything would be OK."

After a few months, Scarola couldn't recognize his mother. She had started chemotherapy and cut her hair. "I fell in love with lacrosse more after my mother got breast cancer. She wasn't able to come to my games because of all the treatment, so I would put her initials and a cross made out of tape on my face mask," he said. "She wasn't physically there, but she was in spirit, and I was playing for her." Toward the end of Scarola's high school tenure, he realized he wouldn't be able to get into college because of his grades. He decided to join the military and told his mother right away.

He thought since the Air Force Academy didn't accept him, he would try lacing his boots as an Airman. Scarola signed the papers, and in October 2006, was shipped off to Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, for basic military training.

Following basic training, Scarola went on to security forces tech school, playing war and learning how to do his job. The day he left school, Scarola found out a close friend and mentor was killed in action. "He was my first ever lacrosse coach in summer camp and a freshman at Duke University, one of the best lacrosse players from Long Island, N.Y.," Scarola said. "To find that he was taken from his family was truly heart breaking because he turned down law school to enlist in the Army." Losing his mentor was the first time the war felt real to Scarola and not just something seen in movies or on TV. That thought stuck with him throughout his trip from Texas to Arkansas.

"My sponsor was very respectful and he treated me like a person. He called me by my first name, helped me with my luggage and helped me get settled into my dorm room," Scarola said. "That was the last time I ever saw him. On May 7, 2007, he was killed in Baghdad, Iraq. For the second time this war got way too real for me." Scarola wanted to fight in the war, but he had to wait his turn. He got his chance to deploy, but it was to the United Arab Emirates where his mission wasn't what he expected, but he was known as the most motivated defender out there.

USAFE-AFARICA completes successful user migration to the Air Force Network

Last month, U.S. Air Forces in Europe-Air Forces Africa completed the much anticipated Air Force Network user migrations.

The AFNet migration moved computers "virtually" from the USAFE network into AFNet and incorporated the use of the "Email for Career" email address for every user across USAFE. Doing this for more than 42 thousand users and more than 32 thousand machines across the command is no small feat, and took years of planning and preparation by every communications unit in the theater along with the USAFE-AFAFRICA Communications Directorate and several Air Force Space Command entities.

Moving USAFE-AFAFRICA users to the AFNet significantly improved security, reduced cost and enabled centralized management of many core data systems across the Air Force. Additionally, cyber operators can operate and defend a standardized communications structure versus looking for vulnerabilities of disparate networks spread across numerous major commands.

In preparation for the overall USAFE-AFAFRICA migration, each USAFE-AFAFRICA base developed and ran hundreds of checklist items.

Furthermore, when these bases were actively migrating, dozens of technicians across the globe worked together to seamlessly migrate thousands of computers and users.

"It is truly amazing what was simultaneously accomplished at so many USAFE-AFAFRICA sites without a single major mission impact," said Capt. Aaron Lake, USAFE-AFAFRICA AFNet migration lead.

"The gains in our cyber defense posture and data system manageability in the context of our current resource-constrained environment made all the efforts worthwhile."

For Airmen leaving USAFE-AFAFRICA and headed to another base that hasn't migrated yet, there is a possibility they may have to go through the migration process again. That possibility will exist until every single machine and account across the Air Force is migrated, something that is scheduled to occur in early 2014.

However, the completion of USAFE-AFAFRICA brings the Air Force to nearly 40 percent complete with all user migrations. For any questions concerning AFNet, contact the Enterprise Service Desk at DSN 510-HELPDESK.

Civilian furloughs affect Ramstein

by Josh Aycock
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

With an influx of reporting on the topic of sequestration and civilian furloughs hitting our email boxes every day, many have become utterly confused and have a 1,001 questions.

What is it? How does it affect me and my office? My civilians have to take a day of unpaid leave every week, why?

We recently sat down with Maggie Montano, 86 Airlift Wing furlough team chief, to ask her the top questions on everyone's mind.

JA: Good morning ma'am. Let's get straight to business. Why are civilians being furloughed? And furthermore, what is a furlough?

MM: A furlough places an employee in a temporary non-duty, non-pay status because of lack of work, reduction or lack of funds, or other non-disciplinary reason. Under the current circumstances, planned furloughs may be required due to the reduction in funding associated with sequestration. Extensive information is available at www.opm.gov/furlough, click on "Guidance for Administrative Furloughs" and "Supplemental Guidance for Administrative Furloughs."

JA: I've heard people around base calling it a "day off." Is that an accurate way to look at it?

MM: Since employees may not work on their furlough days some employees may see it as a day off but it's important they remember they will not receive compensation for it.

JA: Getting down in the weeds for a minute. I'm a civilian, how do I mark this on my timecard if I've been furloughed for a day?

MM: Furlough time off is coded in the Automated Time Attendance and Production Program as KE. (I don't know how DoDEA would annotate their furlough time).

JA: During the past so-called government shutdowns in 1995 and 1996, furloughed civilians were paid retroactively for their lost days. Can they expect something like that this time?

MM: Sequestration and resulting furloughs will affect the civilian workforce differently than a lapse of appropriations (government shutdown). There is no provision for employees to receive retroactive compensation at this time and employees should not plan to receive retroactive compensation.

JA: Is this a punishment for civilians or is everyone being asked to chip in to take the financial hit?

MM: No. The Department of Defense is directing furloughs because if they did not, they would have to make even larger cuts in training and maintenance; cuts that were judged would heighten the already significant risk that sequestration poses to our national security.

JA: Wow, that sounds like we are going through some pretty tough times. How long will these tough times last for?

MM: The furlough will run from July 8 to September 30.

JA: What about next fiscal year? Will the furloughs continue?

MM: DoD is currently executing their FY13 budget with sequestration. No decisions have been made on how sequestration will affect operations and personnel management in FY14. Our fervent hope remains that Congress will detrigger sequestration

JA: Should our readers expect to see any reduction in services around base in the foreseeable future?

MM: Our Airmen, civilians and their families are important to us. The 86th Airlift Wing is doing everything reasonable to continue to provide outstanding services to our community. There are no plans at the present time to limit CDC hours or to curtail youth instructional programs or other family support programs. Should any services need to be adjusted, we will ensure that the affected members of the public are informed in advance. Together, we will get through this difficult period, intelligently balancing our requirements with our resources.

JA: If I'm having difficulty with understanding all this stuff, is there a number or a point of contact on base that I can get in touch with to ask additional questions?

MM: You can contact my team in the 86th FSS Employee Management Relations Office, Ms. Reisa Tidwell (480-7608), Ms. Sherryl Benning (478-6714) or myself (478-6707).

JA: Thank you for your time ma'am. I appreciate the straightforward answers and I'm sure this is going to help many of our readers understand the difficulties that we all face.

AGOW Airman lands communications award

by Senior Airman Aaron-Forrest Wainwright
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The 435th Air Ground Operations Wing recently recognized Staff Sgt. Brandon York, 1st Air and Space Communication Operations Squadron cable and antenna systems journeyman, for the Maj. Gen. Gerald L. Prather Communications and Information Professional of the Year Award.

The award recognizes the Airman who distinguishes himself in a communications career field.

York was deployed to Southwest Asia for more than 170 days, where he led 11 net infrastructure projects, extended communications to seven new facilities and provided KC-10 Extender flight crew emergency alert services, as well as a plethora of other achievements.

"While I was deployed, I (volunteered) and I went to school. I really had to make sure I stayed ahead of everything," York said. "I had to work my butt off."

The 1st CMXS is part of the 435th Air and Space Communications Group, one of three groups assigned to the 435th AGOW.

"It's pretty awesome. I mean, not everyone has the opportunity that I have in my career," York said. "My commander came to congratulate me, but I didn't even know I won."

The 1st CMXS is vital due to high demand and is one of very few teams that can perform recertification and communication functions in Europe. The job itself is a special-duty assignment, where only a select few make it to Ramstein.

"Sergeant York is a hard worker and proved that he deserved it," said Tech Sgt. William Liggins, 435th Air and Ground Operations Wing cable and antenna systems team member.

1st Communications Maintenance Squadron Airman receives Thunderbolt recognition

The 435th Air Ground Operations Wing recognized a member of the 1st Communications Maintenance Squadron as this week's Thunderbolt recipient. This award is the 435th Air Ground Operations Wing commander's way of recognizing his superior performing Airmen.

Tech. Sgt. Bradley Johnson, 1st CMXS special communications team leader, was highlighted for upgrading and installing direct current power circuits for nine network devices on short notice. His attention to detail prevented an additional $64,000 in costs for the 85th Engineering Installation Squadron installation team.

Tech. Sgt. Bradley Johnson, 1st Communications Maintenance Squadron special communication team leader, inspects communication equipment, May 24 on Kapaun. Johnson has been recognized by the 435th Air Ground Operations Wing as the most recent Thunderbolt Award recipient.

"The 1st CMXS, part of the special communication team in Europe, performs advanced troubleshooting and helps with different projects for installations throughout the continent," said Johnson. "One of the things that came down just happened to be at Ramstein."

Johnson was recognized for his efforts in validating the safety and operability of all network equipment ran within the technical control facility.

"I was presented the award at our wing stand up," said Johnson. "I was happy to be recognized for the job we did, it's definitely nice to be acknowledged."

Johnson was recognized by his leadership when he and his team shaved off two weeks from a project that should have taken a month.

"Here at the 1st CMXS we often times have specific people with the sole job of engineering a solution for a specific problem," said 1st Lt. Ronald Furniel, 1st CMXS operations flight commander. "Johnson is an excellent example of that. Recently he went out, found the problem and engineered and installed a solution. A project that should have taken at least a month, he and his team were able to complete in two weeks."

The 1st CMXS's mission includes providing specialized Air Force maintenance support for Department of Defense communication and information systems within the U.S. Air Forces in Europe and Air Forces Africa's area of responsibility.

They also support USAFE-AFAFRICA's engineering and installation requirements by pre-positioning vehicles, resources, design solutions and program management.

The 1st CMXS is Europe's premier "one-stop-shop" for all specialized command and control support and sustainment and assists in restorations for major installations.

USAFE-AFAFRICA BTO localizes "Every Dollar Counts" campaign

by Master Sgt. Norris Agnew
U.S. Air Forces in Europe and Air Forces Africa Public Affairs

To address shrinking budgets, Air Force leaders are calling all Airmen to share their best money-saving ideas through the "Every Dollar Counts" campaign.

Col. Scott A. Forest, chief of the U.S. Air Forces in Europe and Air Forces Africa Business Transformation Office, wants to take that campaign a step further.

Forest and other BTO officials have rolled out a campaign they call "Make It Count," which tailors the Air Force-level initiative to USAFE-AFAFRICA Total Force Airmen.

"Our intent is not to duplicate programs," Forest said. "We are simply providing a platform that is unique to our command for gathering great cost-saving ideas. We want to be good wingmen for our Air Force leadership and offer a way to increase the reach of their efforts."

The "Make It Count" campaign invites people to submit ideas on ways to save money across the command via a SharePoint site. To access the site via a government computer, visitors must have a common access card.

Once on the site, visitors can view submitted ideas, submit their own ideas and even comment on previous posts. The site's interactive aspect is intended to generate creative ways of saving money among visitors.

"We want to attract a good cross section of people to our site," said Maj. Rene Alvidrez, deputy chief of the BTO. "There are folks who already have ideas to share, and we certainly want to make it easy for them to do so at our site. But there are others who are curious and simply want to look at the ideas that have already been submitted.

"We're hoping that in the process of scanning through the ideas that have already been submitted, visitors to the site will be inspired to come up with even more ideas for saving the command money, or add to the ideas already submitted," Alvidrez continued. "Everyone in our command has a part to play when it comes to saving money."

Forest agreed, saying that a command-specific program is the best way to capture those ideas.

"I believe the majority of our best ideas will come from 'boots-on-the-ground' Airmen who see day in and day out specific ways that we as an Air Force can save money," he said.

Although the "Every Dollar Counts" campaign ends Saturday, Forest said it's important to continue the "Make It Count" initiative well beyond that.

"The time for good cost-saving ideas never runs out," Forest said. "And as long as our Total Force Airmen have ideas to share, we want to make it easy for them to share those ideas."

The campaign's share point site can be accessed by going to www.usafe.af.mil and clicking on the "Make It Count" button in the middle of the page.

USO trip giveaway part of garrison community info fair

by Dijon Rolle
USAG Kaiserslautern

U.S. Army Garrison Kaiserslautern will host a community information fair and town hall Wednesday at Vogelweh's Armstrong's Club.

The town hall portion begins at 10 a.m., the information fair runs from 10 a.m. to noon. The USO will give away five $50 vouchers, good toward the booking of any USO day trip.

Representatives from the garrison, the 21st Theater Sustainment Command, 569th U.S. Forces Police Squadron, Family Advocacy Outreach and others will speak to community members and answer questions in person and on the garrison's Facebook page at www.facebook.com/army.kaiserslautern.

All services and civilians are invited to attend both the town hall and information fair. Organizers hope that both events will help attract some of the newest members of the Kaiserslautern Military Community.

"We've got a lot of in transit Heidelberg and Mannheim people coming this way," said Jasmine (Jazz) Byrne, event organizer and plans specialist for the garrison's Plans, Analysis and Integration Office.

Byrne explained that while many Army garrisons have very similar programs and operating procedures, some communities may still have different regulations, paperwork requirements and locations.

"That's another good thing about this information fair. You can grab not only telephone books, but maps and points of contact that can help you locate where some of these agencies are," she added.

"There's information from registering your car to bus schedules, we have ID cards and passports that will have information there. ACS welcome packs, training, language classes," Byrne said. "Come find out what's available out there."

Currently more than 20 agencies and private organizations like The Exchange, the Defense Commissary Agency, Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts of America, International Women's Club, Army Community Service and others, have signed up to participate in the fair.

"We don't choose which agencies will attend. We have a listing of different organizations that we send a mass email invite to. If they reply, they can get a table," said Gina Hranilovic, event organizer and management analyst for the garrison's PAIO.

There is still room and any agencies or private organizations that are interested can call 493-4176/4024 for details.

Farewell Heidelberg celebration set for Saturday

by Dijon Rolle
USAG Kaiserslautern

The Heidelberg military community will celebrate more than 60 years of German and American friendship and service during the "Farewell Heidelberg" celebration June 1 to 9 in Heidelberg.

Officials from U.S. Army Garrison Baden-Württemberg and local businesses like the Heidelberg Print Media Academy have collectively sponsored and organized the week-long event to mark the garrison's deactivation this summer and the end of the U.S. military's presence in Heidelberg.

Organizers have been planning the event for close to a year and see it as an opportunity for community members past and present, to share their memories and to say goodbye to the beloved city.

"Heidelberg seems to have had an effect on the people who were stationed there," said J.R. Orlando, marketing assistant for Heidelberg Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"They seem to have this connection and it only seems fair to give somewhere as special as Heidelberg, the send-off that it deserves and a lot of people feel it deserves, " he said.

Orlando is one of many USAG Baden-Württemberg employees who have recently relocated from Heidelberg to the Kaiserslautern Military Community. Despite the change, Orlando's ties to the city remain strong.

"I just think Heidelberg has been a very special place for me. My family has been there since basically 1994. People have very special memories of Heidelberg and I think that the week of events that we've put together really are a great way to cap off the U.S. Army's time in Heidelberg. I've gotten to see some of the exhibit and I'm very excited about it. There are pictures there that are absolutely surreal," Orlando said.

"Robert Kennedy visited in the '60s and there are pictures of people running alongside the road and waving at his car. There are pictures of General Patton and Elvis Presley. The exhibit is absolutely fantastic and the video is going to be special as well," he added.

The Farewell Heidelberg events kick-off 11 a.m. this Saturday at the Village Pavilion Community Center with a ribbon cutting ceremony for the Farewell Heidelberg multi-media exhibit on Patrick Henry Village. The exhibit will run 2 to 9 p.m. Saturday to June 8 and feature historical photographs, videos and memorabilia showcasing the Heidelberg military community.

Other events include a golf scramble, local USO tours, Rhein Neckar river cruise, festival, fun run, formal social, Heidelberg Castle illumination and more.

Farewell Heidelberg events are open to all community members. Former and current Heidelberg residents are also encouraged to attend. For more details on ticket prices and a full listing of events, visit heidelberg.armymwr.com, the Farewell Heidelberg Facebook page at www.facebook.com/pages/Farewell-Heidelberg and the Information, Tickets and Reservations office located in the Village Pavilion Community Center Bldg. 4507 on PHV in Heidelberg, 388-9438, or 06221-3389438.

Traveling guitars play a new tune for KMC music programs

Story and photos
by Airman 1st Class Jordan Castelan
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

Visitors come and go, however, musician Damon Marks and The Traveling Guitar Foundation left a lasting impact on the music programs in the KMC.

The foundation visited KMC schools and rehabilitation facilities as part of a five-day USO tour of Germany.

Marks and the supporting musicians aimed to reinforce their beliefs in music classes being instrumental in the learning and development process of children and restoring strength to wounded warriors.

"As a musician, to play for our warriors who risk their lives for our freedoms is an amazing feeling," said musician Allan Steelgrave. "It's a way for me to give back and show appreciation for all that they do."

Guitarists of various musical backgrounds preached to all who listened; dedication and hard work pay off in music. Student body musicians had the opportunity to play and sing alongside Marks and his foundation during the concert.

"We want to impact as many children as possible," Marks said. "Every time we go somewhere, we're donating guitars, cables, pickups, amps, music curriculum and whatever helps the music program."

Giovana Kingsberry, a music teacher at Ramstein Middle School, said the concerts and opportunities the foundation provided the school with gives the children something to strive for.

"A lot of times our children don't have these opportunities," Kingsberry said. "We really appreciate the continued support to keep music education alive in our schools."

The last four years, Marks estimated the foundation visited more than 25,000 students during their music clinics, which provided students with musical instruction and the important education using instruments.

For more information about The Traveling Guitar Foundation, visit http://travelingguitarfoundation.org. For more information about local USO events, visit their Facebook page, USO Kaiserslautern.

UTAP saves money, promotes fiscal conservatism

by 86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs staff

The Utility Tax Avoidance Program benefits military and civilian Department of Defense personnel who live in off-base housing.

The UTAP allows military members and Department of Defense employees to legally avoid paying German taxes on certain utilities, saving up to 19 percent value added tax on electricity and natural gas, and seven percent on water.

"This program can save individual households hundreds of dollars in utility expenses annually and the U.S. government hundreds of thousands of dollars," said David Quinn, 86th Force Support Squadron chief of resources management.

The UTAP not only helps DoD members pay for utilities, it also aids the host nation in ensuring bills are correctly paid in the local economy.

The UTAP is entirely voluntary for active-duty personnel, but it is mandatory for many civilian personnel depending on their utility supplier.

To register for the program, personnel must take the following documents to a local UTAP office: a copy of their orders, rental contract (or property deed equivalent in sponsor's name), utility meter numbers and readings, utility company customer number or their first bill, ID card, local bank account information, and enrollment fee.

The UTAP enrollment fee is $77, and it covers a member's entire stay at one residence given there is no change in the utility provider.

For more information about UTAP and how you can start saving, visit your local UTAP office or call the Ramstein UTAP office at 480-5309 or 06371-47-5309

Baumholder's EXPO integrates US, German communities

Two customers listen as a representative from the Idar-Oberstein Chamber of Commerce points out some of the attractions in and around the community of Idar-Oberstein during Baumholder's EXPO May 23. This was the first year the EXPO featured representation from the local German community.

Mixing fun with learning is nothing new, but Baumholder took that concept one step further by creating a festival atmosphere with free food, drinks and entertainment for the more than 1,000 visitors at this year's EXPO and Safety Stand Down Day May 24. The smell of grilled steaks and German wurst wafted into the festival tent as Lt. Col. Mike Sullivan, U.S. Army Garrison Baumholder commander, introduced the concept of EXPO. "So what is the EXPO? That's been the question for five months now at Baumholder.

It's a chance for not only us in Baumholder to let everyone know what we have in our community, but gives support to our German neighbors to highlight what they have to offer outside of the fence here in Baumholder," Sullivan said.

EXPO spanned not only the parking lots in front of the Hall of Champions and Wagon Wheel Theater, but it also included dozens of exhibits and demonstrations inside the hall.

"We had more than 90 participants at this year's EXPO," said EXPO's event coordinator Will Luna. "Considering the weather, we had an excellent turnout for this year's event."

Participants at this year's EXPO ran the gamete of everyone from Army Community Service to every Morale, Welfare and Recreation agency on post, the bank and credit union, the Scouting program and more. One unique participant was the Joint Multinational Training Center with their display of training aids that included things like explosive laden vests, camouflaged explosive devices, alarms, training mannequins and more — everything the Soldier would need to know to help him survive on the battlefield.

Integrating the German communities into this year's EXPO provided a new dimension to the event. Soldiers and families were able to learn about the many recreational opportunities and unique locations in the region and in turn, the representatives of the local communities were put more in touch with the American community.

One over arching observation by the townspeople was the friendliness of Americans and their willingness to learn about Germany and specifically what the local region has to offer.

Each year, EXPO organizers judge the participants and decide who came up with the best display. This year, with the inclusion of the German communities, a new category was created. Winning for the best German display was the community of Nohfelden. The Hilltop Theater took the award of Best Small Organization and the Baumholder Health Clinic was named the Best Large Organization.

They all received certificates of appreciation and the clinic took home the Grand Champion Traveling Trophy.

Commenting on the USAG Baumholder Garrison Facebook site after the event, Sullivan said, "It was incredible to see so many of you there, along with all of our wonderful garrison agencies and partners.

A heartfelt thanks to our local German communities who were there to highlight everything their wonderful towns have to offer us as well. Once again, The Rock set the standard and truly showed USAREUR what right looks like."

Baumholder's Warrior Zone has a new home

U.S. Army Garrison Baumholder Public Affairs

It was seven weeks in the making, but Baumholder's new Warrior Zone is now a reality. The Warrior Zone officially opened at its new location next to the Hall of Champions May 23, only moments after the official opening of the Baumholder EXPO.

The new facility's forte is actually twofold: it's bigger and it looks great.

"The other location was just too small," said Mary Jane Spreier, Warrior Zone relocation coordinator.

The Soldiers now have a lot more room and a large variety of entertainment systems to use. Another perk is that using the Warrior Zone does not cost the Soldiers a dime. It's all free. "They can also bring guests, and they are welcome to use anything in our facility," Spreier said.

Mary Jane Spreier (left) and Emma Robinson serve cake during the grand opening of the Baumholder Warrior Zone on Smith Barracks in Baumholder. The new Warrior Zone is located in Bldg. 8106 next to the Hall of Champions.

The hub of the Warrior Zone is its multifunction room.

"It's kind of a lounge area where people can come in, chill out or watch television," Spreier said.

Next to the lounge is a pool room and game room. Down the hall, there is a computer room with eight computers and a large printer for Soldiers to use.

Free WiFi is also available throughout the building. There's also a movie room that can deliver a real "large screen" experience because that's what it has. If music is more your style, there is also a sound proof music room where anyone can live out their "Guitar Hero" fantasies.

But in these austere times for the military and the economy in general, where did the financial backing for all the games and furnishings come from?

"We found out that the Heidelberg Warrior Zone was closing, so we went looking to see what they had available, and they offered to give us everything that we would take.

We went to Heidelberg three times in the last seven weeks to pick things up. It was still all good stuff and we're thankful for it. We're very thankful for it," Spreier said.

The need for a place like the Warrior Zone is obvious.

"Soldiers need to get out of the barracks. They need to unwind, have fun, goof around, play pool, or just relax and not think about their daily work schedule," Spreier said.

For that reason, the Warrior Zone steers away from a military atmosphere.

"We don't want the Warrior Zone to be too much military," Spreier said. "We want them to have fun here. They need to get away from the stress of daily operations."

The Warrior Zone is open from 3:30 to 10:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, and 4:30 to 11:30 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

"I hope that the Soldiers come in and use the facility," Spreier said. "My two employees are waiting to see people in here and have fun."

Director details furlough plans for DOD schools

by Karen Parrish
American Forces Press Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Students, teachers and parents of the Defense Department's schools can be confident that despite the department's upcoming civilian furloughs, the school year will start on time, the Department of Defense Education Activity's director said today.

DODEA operates schools overseas and at some U.S. locations for the children of military families.

In an interview at the school system's headquarters at the Mark Center here, Marilee Fitzgerald told the Pentagon Channel and American Forces Press Service that while her workforce will be affected by the coming furloughs, leaders are working together to ensure the least possible impact on students.

"We'll take a five-day instructional loss," Fitzgerald explained. "Fortunately, this is occurring in the DOD schools, where there is probably no group of teachers who are better prepared for this kind of challenge."

Fitzgerald explained that like other DOD employees, 12-month DODEA employees — including headquarters workers, principals and others — will be scheduled for up to 11 furlough days to begin no earlier than July 8. Nine-month DODEA employees, including teachers and some staff members, will be scheduled for up to five furlough days beginning in September, she added.

"The goal of all of our teachers — and everyone, really, in DODEA — is to try to ensure that there is the least disruption possible to the educational life and experience of our children," she said. "You know, we're in the teaching and learning business. That's what we do. And we're not going to sacrifice one minute that those children are in front of us, to try and help them gain the kind of knowledge that they will need to be successful in the school year."

DODEA schools will be open, but will not conduct regular classes on furlough days, she said. Fitzgerald explained that many school employees, including host-nation employees in overseas schools, are exempt from furlough.

"We can still do extracurricular activities [on furlough days], but those activities must occur after the school day," she said. The director added that furlough days will not be scheduled on standardized testing days, and will most often happen on a Monday or Friday, to regulate students' schedules as much as possible.

Fitzgerald noted that DODEA's teachers are attuned to the needs of their students, who change schools and even countries of residence frequently, often while also dealing with the challenges of having a parent deployed to a war zone.

The teachers will focus on making the best possible use of the classroom time they do have, and will give students extra reading assignments and homework to help them make up the loss of classroom time, she added.

Fitzgerald noted that education research indicates instructional time is crucial, and that from an educator's perspective, five days should be added to the school year, not subtracted from it.

"We're going to be watching that carefully, and our teachers are acutely aware of that research," she said. "They understand the challenge here in trying to help our children make up, if you will, for that instructional loss. ... We're hoping the effect will be minimal."

Fitzgerald said the question of maintaining school accreditation — which the current plan will maintain — was important when the issue of furloughs arose. She said she had been troubled a few months ago, when early discussions spoke of possible 22-day furloughs. "This was a great concern to the department," she said. "There are threshold requirements in our accreditation standards, and we felt that if we went below 175 days of classroom instruction, we were really threatening our accreditation process.

Fortunately, the department was able, even in this very severe budget crisis, to ensure that we took a fewer number of days so that we wouldn't in any way compromise our accreditation."

She said DOD places great value on its education activity and its educators and staffs, who run schools around the world and on military installations across the country.

"They've made great investments in the education of our children, and they certainly understand the importance that a quality education has to our nation, [and] to the recruitment and retention of a quality workforce. ... I think they demonstrated that when they reduced the number of furlough days for our employees," she said.

Furloughing school employees demonstrates the depth of crisis facing DOD, Fitzgerald said. "I found every opportunity, every effort being made, to ensure that we would not have to furlough," she added. "[Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel] himself, in his letters, has said he came by this decision with great pain and great regret." DOD, DODEA, and every other agency devoted to securing the nation's future are struggling under the current budget and deficit conditions, Fitzgerald noted. "I don't think the department would make this decision if it weren't for this financial crisis," she added. DODEA is not planning to conduct further furloughs beyond the coming school year, she said.

"That can't become a routine," she added. "I believe the department is committed to this investment that it's making in the education of the children, so budget cuts would have to come from other sources, within DODEA and within the department itself, to try and avoid impacting the educational program. We would just have to stop doing certain things."

Fitzgerald said around the world, DODEA's employees will work to keep morale high and their focus on the children, but she acknowledged the furloughs would have an effect. "This is going to be a very difficult time for our families and our employees," she said.

Still, Fitzgerald said, she's confident her workforce will "push through" the professional and personal difficulties that a loss of classroom time and a loss of pay will bring. "It's not a heavy lift to keep our teachers motivated," she said. "In fact, during times of great crisis, you will see our teachers ... be the first ones to tell you, 'Let's stay focused on the mission.'"

Educators are people whose career choice is motivated by love of the work, she pointed out. "They believe they can make a difference in the lives of these children," she said. "That characteristic is actually present in all DODEA employees. That's what makes DODEA so special."

From the headquarters to each individual school, she said, "our focus is on the children. It's not about us, it's about them." Her entire workforce understands the challenges they're facing with a five-day instructional loss this year, Fitzgerald said.

"I would tell you that the prevailing feeling is, while there is great disappointment and concern ... during this whole process, the one thing I think you'll find in DODEA is that they will rally, and they will look back on this — and they want everyone to do so — with the sense that, 'Yes, those were tough times, and we performed magnificently,'" she added.

Principals are now working to schedule the precise furlough schedules their schools will observe, Fitzgerald said. She added that parents should contact their local school offices and websites for more information on furlough schedules.

"I can say this to all of our parents: the school calendar shows a report date, an opening of school, and that won't change," she said. "These furlough days ... are not going to be taken, probably, until after the Labor Day holiday. So teachers, parents, children should report to school on time."

Man on the Street – Graduation

The school year is finally coming to a close for the Ramstein High School class of 2013 June 7. We asked: How do you feel now that graduation is around the corner?

— by Meghan Augsburger, Ramstein High School intern

Anna Priddy: "I couldn't be more excited. High school has had its ups and downs, with several adventures and learning experiences, but it's time for a new chapter. I am looking forward to meeting new people and living in the states for the first time since I was 6!"

Taylor Larson: "I feel really anxious and ready for high school to be over. It seems like it won't ever end and I'm just trying to make it through these final weeks."

Jessica Williams: "These last few weeks before and after graduation are going to be extremely busy for me. Most of all, I'm just looking forward to the summer and getting a chance to relax and catch up!"

Jessica McGrew: "Other than the cliched worry of tripping on stage or dropping my diploma, I can't wait! Throwing my cap in the air with the rest of the class of 2013 at graduation is a moment I've been looking forward to for all of high school."

Catherine Sullivan: "I am so ready! I've been waiting for graduation since the first day of first grade! Well, not really, but I've been so excited for such a long time!"

Ramstein Middle School students see fun side of food careers

Staff Sgt. John Zumer
10th Army Air and Missile Defense Command Public Affairs

In the course of a long military career, CW2 Bill Michitsch, 10th Army Air and Missile Defense Command G-4 food service technical adviser, has visited 28 countries and 43 states. Despite the glitz and glamour of being a world traveler, however, a chance to share his culinary experiences with Ramstein Middle School students was one adventure he wouldn't pass up for other exotic locations.

"My best times in the Army were in Haiti (providing earthquake relief in 2010) and when I get to do this," said Michitsch, a native of Tivoli (Red Hook), N.Y.

The May 17 visit was facilitated by Sequinn Lee, a sixth-grade teacher at RMS who coordinates the school's Advancement via Individual Determination college preparatory program. With three students from the class contemplating future careers in food service, Lee was grateful for the first-hand experiences Michitsch was able to share with her prospective chefs and the other students.

"To see someone with CW2 Michitsch's experience and expertise is not only inspirational, but shows that with hard work and determination they can accomplish anything they want to," Lee said.

AVID is a language arts-based curriculum with emphasis on the writing process and writing as a tool of learning.

In addition to inquiry and collaboration, students also learn academic survival skills, time management, note taking and improved study habits, among other things. Students enjoyed listening to the many anecdotes Michitsch shared about his food service career, which also contained a healthy dose of instruction and reminders.

"Everybody loves food, needs food and wants food," he said, all the while stressing proper temperatures, hygiene and creativity in the culinary arts.

Students were treated to demonstrations in attractively garnishing fruits and vegetables for the dinner table. With active participation by the students, bananas, melons, radishes and apples were transformed into fruit cups and other objects that all students were able to sample.

"I love cooking, and this just showed me that I can do more things with food and experiment," said Hayden Patton, a sixth-grader in the AVID class contemplating a food service career.

U.S. Army CW2 Bill Michitsch, 10th Army Air and Missile Defense Command G-4 food service technical adviser, shows students at Ramstein Middle School how to attractively garnish fruits and vegetables May 17. The students were part of the Advancement via Individual Determination college preparatory program, which showcases life skills needed to succeed in a variety of careers.

Many students asked Michitsch questions during the class on topics ranging from career choices, working in the food industry and how Army cooking differs from the civilian market. Regardless of the challenges faced in any future endeavor or career, Michitsch urged the students to maintain a positive, never-quit attitude.

"Don't let anybody tell you that you can't do it," Michitsch said.

Lee agreed, emphasizing the continued importance of AVID and related programs in helping to teach students how to be more critical, independent thinkers, whether they follow a career in food service or not.

"It's all about problem solving and learning to use what you have up here," Lee said.

SCHOOLS AROUND THE KMC

Administrator meeting

Administrators from the four Wiesbaden schools recently met with their new Superintendent and school counterparts in the Kaiserslautern School District. The Superintendent, Dr. Dell McMullen, along with administrators from Baumholder, Bitburg, Kaiserslautern, Ramstein and Spangdahlem gave them a warm welcome. With the impending closure of the Heidelberg district, supervision of the Wiesbaden schools was transferred to the Kaiserslautern district. Interesting bits of trivia: All four of Wiesbaden's principals are women; and Sharon O'Donnell is the lone female among the district's five high school principals.

Hot air balloons

Students at VES were treated to the launching of the STEM Club's hot air balloons and water bottle rockets May 8. This was the final highlight completing their efforts in rocketry, weather and robotics. In the rocketry unit, students were "given $1,000,000" to design and build their rocket. If they went over budget, they would not have money left to launch. Students carefully decided where each dollar would go as to be able to launch their rocket on launch day. Pictured are Cameo Brady, Laurie Arensdorf, Chase Lamkin and Kayla Carter.

86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

County road L379 between Obermoschel and Waldgrehweiler will close to motorized traffic from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. The union community of Alsenz-Obermoschel will sponsor its second car-free event in the Moscheltal valley. Along the 10 kilometers stretch, L379 will turn into an adventure area for bicyclists, hikers and skaters.

The villages along the route — Obermoschel, Sitters, Schiersfeld, Finkenbach-Gersweiler and Waldrehweiler — will offer an entertaining program, including live music, children's activities and flea markets. Associations and restaurants will serve food specialties such as roasted chicken, bratwurst, steaks, beef with horseradish, salmon and herring brötchen, flammkuchen and waffles.

Obermoschel, known as the smallest town in the Pfalz, will open the radio museum from 1 to 5 p.m.

Sitters will start the event with with a bikers' worship service at 10:30 a.m. near the community hall. Children can take part in a gold-nugget search, jump on a bouncy castle and create street paintings.

Schiersfeld will also offer a bouncy castle and a game mobile. In the village of Finkenbach-Gersweiler, a private garden will open to the public on Inselstrasse 10. The owner takes part in the community-wide event called "Open Garden Doors 2013." Other special gardens with ponds will be open in Hohlweg 10 in Waldgrehweiler and Auf dem Sonnenborn 6 in Obermoschel.

In Waldgrehweiler, there will be live music and a stand where visitors can test their dart throwing skills.

If walkers get tired, they can take a ride in the horse taxi.

Obermoschel is located on federal street B420, north of Lauterecken.

Ramstein Officers' Spouses Club scholarship winners

It's not every day that $109,750 is awarded in scholarships to students and spouses from the KMC. Seventy-five recipients were awarded scholarships during a ceremony held recently at the Galaxy Theater on Ramstein.

The scholarships were awarded by the KMC Scholarship Committee, a joint committee from the three spouses clubs that serve the KMC: Ramstein Officers' Spouses Club, Kaiserslautern Landstuhl Spouses' Association, and Ramstein Enlisted Spouses' Association.

The clubs combined funds to award deserving high school students attending KMC high schools and to military spouses or Department of Defense civilians living and working in the KMC. Each applicant must have a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or higher to be eligible for a scholarship. This year, 110 applications were received — the highest amount ever! Fifty-eight high school seniors received scholarships totaling $84,750. Seventeen spouses were awarded scholarships totaling $25,000. The amount granted per student this year ranged from $250 to $8,000.

The committee chose from an impressive group of applicants — 26 of the high school seniors had greater than a 4.0 GPA. The eligible applicants are judged on scholarship, volunteerism, extracurricular activities and paid employment. The top high school recipient was Vincent Falls and the top spouse recipient was Perla Hopkins.

"It is great the way our sister organizations can work together and give so much back to the community," said ROSC president Cheryl Price. "For the ROSC, the money donated comes directly from the Ramstein Welfare Bazaar. ROSC is proud to support so many individuals who are pursuing their education and personal goals to achieve higher success. The smiles on the faces of the recipients as they learned how much they were awarded was priceless."

ROSC has planed, organized and executed the Ramstein Welfare Bazaar for the past 48 years to benefit the KMC. Each year, a significant portion of the bazaar's proceeds goes toward KMC scholarships. Funds for scholarships were also contributed by RESA and KLSA.

Their donations are funded by proceeds from the thrift shops around the KMC and other fundraisers.

HIGH SCHOOL CATEGORY RECIPIENTS:

SPOUSE CATEGORY WINNERS:

Gemmel Bagley, Emilia Cortez-Janes, Avril Featherstone, Diana Gonzalez, Sarah Philpot, Shannon Amato, Michelle Baldwin, Sarah Berger, Perla Brito, Jill Lindberg, Sharon Wilt, Anne Woodley, Susan Kelly, Hillary Cangelosi, Amy Morrissette, Janine Nabity and Perla Hopkins

The 2013 Ramstein Welfare Bazaar committee has already begun planning for this year's bazaar, which will take place from Sept. 12 to 15.

A portion of the proceeds from the Ramstein Welfare Bazaar helps to fund the scholarships. The bazaar committee is accepting applications for volunteers at their website, www.ramsteinbazaar.org. You can also "like" them on Facebook at Ramstein Welfare Bazaar.

A year later, on May 7, 2009, Scarola volunteered for a yearlong deployment to Iraq to train the Iraqi police. Three months later, Scarola found himself in Baghdad, Iraq, where he was responsible for 12 lives as the lead gunner in a four-vehicle formation. His job was to spot threats, from combatants to roadside bombs.

In addition to being the lead gunner, he was also responsible for DNA collection. Whenever there was a suicide bomber or an IED blast in the district, Scarola's squad was the first unit on scene. "The day I'll never forget on my deployment was the Iraqi election day," he said. "I've never heard so many explosions before in my life, except 4th of July. There was an explosion at one of the election polls that killed 62 people, so my unit went out and I just knew there were things there that I didn't want to see.

"We dismounted and I started to swab for the bomber's blood. There were body parts in the area and I became numb, but I still did my job," Scarola continued. The team finished the job and headed back to base. "On our way back we took the same route we always do, but it wasn't nearly as busy. We noticed that the Iraqi guards were behaving differently, but we decided to press through the checkpoint anyway," he said. "As soon as our second vehicle crossed the checkpoint, the guards ran away. We made it about 150 feet past the checkpoint when I saw (the checkpoint) explode." Scarola's team sped back to base, where he debriefed the intelligence team about the situation.

"I could have died or become a wounded warrior that day. It really stuck with me. I thank God every day because I made it out of there alive," he said. Scarola made it back from deployment, but he returned a different person.

"I had a chip on my shoulder; I wanted to be back in combat," he said. "That was home to me." The sounds of war echoed in his thoughts. Listening to those sounds were the only thing that helped lull him to sleep. After a while, a couple of Scarola's friends pulled him aside and mentioned he should seek help.

"I walked into mental health the next day, and six months of one-on-one treatment with mental health brought the worst out of me," he said. After those sessions, Scarola realized he wanted to give back. He became an instructor at the 435th SFS Creek Defender Course, teaching deploying Airmen skills and techniques that could save their lives.

"After teaching these Airmen for two years I realized this was the most gratifying job I've had," Scarola said.

"I've gotten emails and phone calls from people who have come back thanking me for what I've done. It was easy for me. Speaking about what I've gone through helped my healing process."

Scarola moved on from the Regional Training Center to become the unit deployment manager for the 435th SFS. Currently, Scarola has applied to the U.S. Air Force Honor Guard where he hopes to give back to the families of deceased service members.

(Editor's note: This is the second part in an ongoing series where Ramstein Airmen share their stories with the community.)

Minimalist Running: Should you go barefoot?

A relatively small group of individuals actually practice true barefoot running, which is running without shoes at all. Minimalist footwear, or barefoot-style shoes (for basic protection from sharp and hazardous materials), have become increasingly popular among runners. However, the question still remains, can you reduce your chance of running related injuries by switching to minimalist shoes, or do you just develop different types of injuries?

The running shoe industry is a multimillion dollar industry. Despite all the advances in running shoe technology, injuries among runners still remains high, with about 50 percent of runners likely to be injured in a given year.

True barefoot runners tend to strike the ground on their forefoot (front of foot) or mid foot (further back toward the arch), causing the runner to take softer, shorter strides. The majority of runners in shoes strike the ground with their heels, producing heavier, longer strides. From an efficiency standpoint, adopting a mid-to-fore foot strike pattern does make you a more efficient runner. Yet, does it make you more resistant to injury?

Research on this topic is lacking. No one has studied that specific question. Proponents of the minimalist shoes suggest that our bodies are designed to run on our mid-to-fore foot and not back on our heels. Therefore, by transitioning from a standard running shoe to a minimalist running shoe, you would potentially be running how our bodies are designed, more efficient and resistant to injury.

Most recently, a study was published in the "Medicine and Science in Sports and Exercise Journal" (February 2013) specifically about this topic of minimalist footwear. The researchers recruited 36 experienced runners: men and women, who had been running between 15 and 30 miles a week while wearing normal running shoes.

All the volunteers underwent an MRI scan of their lower legs and feet to check for any injuries or problems. Half of the group members were assigned to continue running their normal running gait: same mileage, same shoes.

The other half were given a pair of barefoot-style shoes and asked to begin incorporating some barefoot-like mileage into their runs, but gradually. They were told to wear the minimalist shoes for one mile during the first week of the study, two miles the second, three the third, and then as much as they liked, which is what was recommended at the time of the 2011 study. After the study, the participants received follow-up MRI scans. There was no evidence of tissue damage in any of the runners. However, more than half of the minimalist running shoe group showed early signs of bone injuries in their feet.

The MRI revealed that most in the minimalist shoe group had developed bone marrow edema — an accumulation of fluid, similar to what happens during bruising, in the bones of their feet. Two of the runners even had full stress fractures. In addition, almost all members of the minimalist shoe group were spontaneously running fewer miles at the end of the 10 week study.

So, what can you take away from this study? The researchers didn't take into account the participants' foot strike patterns, running gait or body weight. This was a relatively small study and the researchers didn't provide any guidance about transitioning to a barefoot-style shoe.

These results don't imply that everyone who decides to make the switch to minimalist shoes will get injured. The key is to make the transition slowly and make sure you focus on modifying your gait.

To learn more about running technique and gait, visit the Ramstein Health and Wellness Center in Bldg. 2117-A. Gait analysis, a shoe station and a running clinic are all available to assist in meeting your goals, improving efficiency and injury prevention. For more information, email 86amds.hawc@ramstein.af.mil or call 480-4292.

Hangover Part 3 (R) — It's been two years. Phil (Bradley Cooper), Stu (Ed Helms) and Doug (Justin Bartha) are happily living uneventful lives at home. Tattoos have been lasered off, files purged. The last they heard from disaster-magnet Leslie Chow (Ken Jeong), he'd been tossed into a Thai prison and, with him out of the way, the guys have very nearly recovered from their nights prowling the seamy side of Las Vegas in a roofie'd haze, and being kidnapped, shot at, and chased by drug- dealing mobsters in Bangkok. "The Hangover Part III" is the epic conclusion to an incomparable odyssey of mayhem and bad decisions, in which the guys must finish what they started by going back to where it all began: Las Vegas.

Fast & Furious 6 (R) —Vin Diesel, Paul Walker and Dwayne Johnson lead the returning cast of all-stars as the global blockbuster franchise built on speed races to its next continent in Fast & Furious 6. Reuniting for their most high-stakes adventure yet, fan favorites Jordana Brewster, Michelle Rodriguez, Tyrese Gibson, Sung Kang, Gal Gadot, Chris "Ludacris" Bridges and Elsa Pataky are joined by badass series newcomers Luke Evans and Gina Carano.
