Aircrews deliver on-time for Steadfast Javelin II

by Airman 1st Class Jordan Castelan
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

More than a dozen C-130 and C-17 aircraft from two continents and six states are providing tactical airlift from the power projection platform at Ramstein Air Base for Exercise Steadfast Javelin II.

The NATO-led exercise, which ended Thursday, included active-duty and Air National Guard Airmen collaborating with paratroopers from the 1st Battalion, 503rd Infantry Regiment (Airborne) and multinational forces to prepare U.S., NATO Allies and European security partners to conduct unified land operations.

Combat airlift played a pivotal role in the exercise's overall mission success, however the flying mission began well before takeoff.

It is another day at the Kisling NCO Academy for an ambitious senior NCO. He sits at his desk cluttered with homework, notebooks and pens in an attempt to understand and learn how to interact with and relate to Airmen.

What sets him apart from the 15 other students wearing the recognizable sage green, tiger-striped U.S. Air Force uniform surrounding him is the Ukrainian flag Velcroed on the side of his sleeve.

What do you do after a traffic accident?

by Staff Sgt. Joel Reyes
569th U.S. Forces Police Squadron

The 86th Airlift Wing recently created a step-by-step traffic accident information pamphlet for use in the unfortunate event you are involved in a traffic accident on- or off-base.

This pamphlet outlines the actions you must take if you are involved in an accident while living in Germany. The new pamphlet will be handed out at the Kapaun Vehicle Registration office starting in September.

So, say you unfortunately find yourself involved in a minor traffic accident. What do you do? This is a question all Americans need to have an answer to while living in Germany. Take a deep breath, and then carefully survey the scene around you. Evaluate your condition. Are you injured? Can you safely exit your car? Collect your thoughts before you act, and keep tensions under control. Most importantly, be polite and professional.

Should I call Polizei and military law enforcement? Should I exchange information? While the answer to most of these questions is "yes," the severity of the traffic accident will dictate the answer. Recently, the reporting requirements for Air Force personnel in the KMC were revised to be more convenient for Airmen and their dependents. The new rules enable compliance with higher headquarters regulations and German laws but ease some existing requirements.

One key change is related to how you should report a minor traffic accident. In the past, reporting time to law enforcement for a minor traffic accident was immediately. This has changed to within 24 hours for

by Senior Airman Holly Mansfield
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

This year's Combined Federal Campaign-Overseas kicked off Sept. 5 with an Army vs. Air Force bubble soccer game.

Col. G. Shawn Wells, U.S. Army Garrison Rheinland-Pfalz commander, put out a challenge video to the Air Force on YouTube, challenging them to a game of bubble soccer to start this year's CFC-O.

Members of the Army's 212th Combat Support Hospital, the Air Force's 86th Airlift Wing and U.S. Air Forces in Europe and Air Forces Africa played in the game for the annual event where service members and civilian personnel can contribute to thousands of charities that help those in need around the world.

Squadrons will have their own CFC-O representatives who will help members donate.

Members wishing to donate can look through the 2014 "Catalog of Caring" or visit www.

Kuzmenko's family severed ties with him for staying loyal to Ukraine.

"My mother, brother and grandfather currently live in the conflict zones," said Kuzmenko slowly with a slight pause. "I am the only one who is fighting against the Russian invasion."

Kuzmenko is attending the U.S. Air Force Kisling NCO Academy on Kapaun Air Station to learn alongside his U.S. Air Force peers.

Kuzmenko served his country when Crimea was annexed. This led him to a new position with the Ukrainian joint staff as an NCO development specialist.

Working with the new department offered him an opportunity — a chance to improve his skills with the Air Force.

Kuzmenko entered the NCO Academy in August as the first full-time Ukrainian student. His studies at Kisling were part of an agreement between the Department of Defense and European and African nations to develop and train NCOs.

"I understand that it's very important to know the personal values and how to operate with this knowledge in our relationships, teams, environment and inside our units," Kuzmenko said.

Kuzmenko said he may be facing more than the separatist forces when he returns home to develop a Ukrainian NCO corps, which was originally modeled after the Soviet Army.

"We have to grow our military, and we will do it," he said.

But on the other side, he said there may be pressure and natural resistance to change.

"I need to share the ideas I learned (at NCOA) in the right way … because we can't change in one day," Kuzmenko said. "I need to adapt the ideas to my nation's mindset, environment and to our military experience."

Kuzmenko received his graduation diploma alongside 14 other Airmen Thursday.

Preparing defense instructors

Senior Master Sgt. Ryan Alton (left), 603rd Air and Space Operations Center superintendent, practices a ground-based self-defense technique with Tech. Sgt. Matthew Mlynarczyk, 1st Combat Communications Squadron quality assurance, during the Gracie Defense Systems seminar Sept. 4 on Ramstein.

Walking down a street alone, you receive a text message. While responding, you don't notice the person quickly approaching from behind. By the time you do, it's too late. The person moves to strike. What do you do?

More than 100 members from the KMC and other U.S. military bases in Europe not only got the chance to learn what to do in a similar situation, but also how to teach others what to do after taking the Gracie Defense Systems seminar Sept. 1 to 5 on Ramstein.

Gracie Defense Systems is a five-day instructor certification course that teaches modified Jiu-Jitsu techniques emphasizing the use of leverage and timing over strength and speed to make them more accessible to smaller framed individuals. Techniques range from preemptive boundary setting to physical self-defense designed to neutralize an aggressor.

"It's important to approach any problem from multiple directions," said Gracie Defense Systems instructor Eve Gracie. "This is just one of those options — (another) tool to add to the toolbox."

During the seminar, the participants learned different strategies to be more aware of their surroundings, recognize warning signs and escape potentially dangerous situations.

"I had no idea what to expect coming in," said student Kelly Bellew. "It's totally amazing to me, because I'm not fitness oriented. I don't go to the gym. I'm not strong, but this is the first time someone has shown me that you don't need strength and moves to defend against a man that may overpower me. I can use my leverage. It's just giving you the tools that you may need to get out of any situation."

The participants in this seminar will have 90 days to train and practice the techniques. In that time, they will be required to send videos to the Gracie Jiu-Jitsu Academy showing themselves performing the techniques. If their proficiency is deemed adequate, they will

"Our timeline begins regularly five hours or more before we take to the air," said Tech. Sgt. Mathew Merkley, 37th Airlift Squadron loadmaster. "Before an aircraft can take to the skies, loadmasters and crew chiefs examine the aircraft from tail to nose."

Operation specifics vary widely from mission to mission, but the responsibility of the aircraft lies with the aircrew operating it.

"I'm responsible for this (C-130J) Super Hercules," said Senior Airman Christian McDevitt, 37th AS loadmaster. "Pilots, passengers and cargo rely on me to ensure the safe and proper packaging and distribution of whatever we might be carrying. It is up to me and my fellow loadmasters to safely deliver our manifest."

To see more photos from the exercise, see pages 20 and 21.

Airmen remaining properly positioned are also a factor when handling real-world and exercise situations.

"We at the 37th AS stand on alert constantly and are ready for whatever life may throw our way," said Capt. Clayton Martin, 37th AS pilot. "Operationally speaking, we are called upon to supply safe, accurate, fast and successful airlift power within our area of operation and we make it our duty to do so."

By maintaining an always ready posture, the 37th AS prepared itself to fluidly and effectively work with the 1st Bn., 503rd Inf. Regt. while refreshing its interoperability with multinational forces.

"The constant training and interactions with the people we support allows us to understand the needs and necessities of the Army, or any partners to successfully complete their objectives," Martin said.

As the propellers stopped spinning, the loadmasters completed final checks and the pilots stretched their legs after a long flight. Once again the loadmasters and pilots of the 37th AS completed another mission successfully.

"Tonight we were able to drop 4,000 pounds of cargo along with 36 paratroopers quickly, accurately and, most importantly, safely," said Airman 1st Class Emily Mitchell, 37th AS loadmaster. "It's a thrilling experience to know I'm bringing these Soldiers and their fight to the drop zone."

Whether it is cargo, passengers, humanitarian aid or paratroopers, the 37th AS and its aircrew are ready to deliver on time and target wherever they are tasked to fly.

Letter to Airmen: RAND study

by Gen. Mark A. Welsh III
Chief of staff of the U.S. Air Force

WASHINGTON — Many of you have recently been invited to participate in the 2014 RAND Military Workplace Study.

This Web-based survey assesses your recent experiences with military workplace relations, professionalism and personal safety. It's not "just another survey."

This one is part of our newly designed, recurring set of surveys that will allow both the Air Force and the Department of Defense to establish baselines and measure progress against issues that keep you or those around you from feeling like the critically important member of the team that you are.

We've worked hard to stagger these surveys so we periodically give each of you a chance to help us improve the Air Force without burying you in surveys over time.

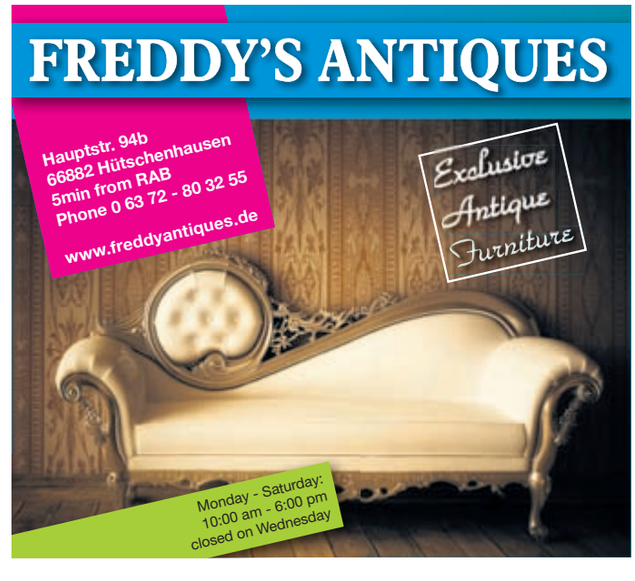
This week marks the mid-way point for the survey, and I want to personally thank the 30,000 plus Airmen who have already completed it. The secretary and I appreciate getting your direct feedback on these issues.

If you have been invited to take the survey but have not completed it yet, I hope you recognize its importance and will find a few minutes to sit down privately and answer these questions about your experiences. It really doesn't take long, and your input is critically important to making our Air Force a better place to live and work.

This survey can be completed using a government computer during duty hours or on a smartphone or home computer. The RAND Corporation, which is conducting the study, will protect the confidentiality of your survey responses. No one in the Air Force or in the DOD will ever be able to identify your individual survey responses.

By just taking a few minutes of your time to complete the survey, you will help us provide a stronger and healthier workplace for all Airmen. No one else can give us your perspective; we need to hear it!

Thanks for your help with this, and thanks for the incredible things you do every day! Continue to take care of each other.



Stay fire safe around the house

by Master Sgt. Edward J. Seeley Sr.
NCOIC, fire prevention

As we are nearing the anniversary of one of the largest disasters of the 19th century — the great Chicago fire of Oct. 8, 1871 — we must remind ourselves of the importance of safe fire practices.

Fire safety shouldn't simply be a one-time affair, but instead a lifetime routine that we practice ourselves and teach to our children. For example, fire and burns are the leading cause of household injuries and deaths in the United States.

"In fact, it is the third most common source," according to The Home Safety Council, 2014.

This is such an unfortunate statistic that's compounded when you take into consideration how simple it actually is to take preventative measures.

The following are some helpful tips that, when used correctly, will help prevent the spread of fire and lead to a happy and safer tenure while at home in Germany.

To start, negligent cooking is the No. 1 cause of residential fires.

Consider these simple steps:

• Don't store items on cooking surfaces.

• Never pour water on a grease fire. Instead, close the oven door, or turn off the source of heat and cover the pan with a lid.

• Clean the exhaust hood and duct over the stove regularly, and wipe up spilled grease as soon as the surface of the stove is cool.

• Consider dressing for cooking success. Here's why: An electrical coil on the stove reaches a temperature of 800 degrees Fahrenheit. A gas flame can reach 1,000 degrees. Your dish towel or pot holder will catch fire at 400 degrees, and so can your bathrobe, apron or loose sleeve shirt. Also, be sure your stove is not located under a window where curtains are hanging.

Second, a space heater can be the most dangerous appliance brought into the home.

Negligent cooking, such as pouring water on a grease fire, is the No. 1 cause of residential fires.

Follow these simple steps to eliminate or decrease their likelihood of causing a fire:

• Carefully inspect your space heaters prior to the start of every heating season.

• Keep space heaters at least three feet away from anything that might burn, including the wall.

• Don't use extension cords with electrical space heaters. Plug them directly into a wall. The high amount of current they require could melt the cord and start a fire.

• Do not store newspapers, rags or other combustible materials near a furnace, hot water heater or space heater, and don't leave space heaters operating when you're not in the room.

Third, candles are relatively safe products, but unless they are used safely and watched carefully, they can lead to accidental fires.

According to the National Candle Association, more than 15,000 candle fires are reported annually. The bulk of fires are due to consumer inattention.

Follow these simple steps:

• Always keep a burning candle within sight.

• Extinguish all candles when leaving a room or before going to sleep.

• Keep candles out of reach of children and pets. Do not place lit candles where they can be knocked over by children, pets or anyone else.

• Place burning candles at least three inches apart from one another. This is to make sure they don't melt one another or create their own drafts that will cause the candles to burn improperly.

• Be sure the candleholder is placed on a stable, heat-resistant surface. This will also help prevent possible heat damage to counters and table surfaces and prevent glass containers from cracking or breaking.

Lastly, practice exit procedures with your family. Teach children to stay low when escaping a fire, and always check doors with the back of the hand.

Home fire safety is a vital part of protecting members of your household from the devastating effects of a fire. By following these fire prevention tips, you and your family can prevent these situations from turning into serious injury, loss of life and property damage.

Remember to be fire safe, and only you can prevent household fires.

Also, remember to dial 1-1-2 or 06371-47-1-1-2 in the event of an emergency. Should you have any questions or concerns, fire prevention can be reached at 480-5940 or 06371-47-5940.

Regardless of who won at bubble soccer, participants benefited by donating to their favorite charity.

"It's a good way to kick off the CFC-O, because we are doing this together," said 2nd Lt. Adam Andrews, 86th Vehicle Readiness Squadron readiness and resources flight commander. "Its good fun, just like the CFC should be, and we are here to fundraise."

Four officer AFSCs by year group will not meet October RIF board

by Debbie Gildea
Air Force Personnel Center Public Affairs

JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO-RANDOLPH, Texas — Line of the Air Force officers in four Air Force specialty codes by year group are no longer scheduled to meet the fiscal year 2015 Force Management Reduction in Force board slated for Oct. 1.

Updated matrices have been posted to the myPers website. AFSCs by year group that will not meet the board include 2002 21R logistics readiness, 65F financial management, 2007 61B behavioral science/human factors scientist, and 61D physicist/nuclear engineer.

The board will still evaluate LAF and LAF-judge advocate officers for continued retention.

Because of previously approved retirements and separations and ongoing voluntary program opportunities, the Air Force has met the overall end strength goal in the fields and year groups removed from the eligibility matrix.

Eligible Year Groups/Competitive Categories

Airmen eligible to meet the board include LAF captains in year groups 2006 through 2008 and LAF majors in year groups 2001 through 2003 (computed by total active federal commissioned service date) in specific AFSCs, unless specifically excluded. AFSCs and year groups vary depending on category, so eligible Airmen should review the matrices on the myPers website to determine if they are eligible.

The board will also consider LAF-JA officers in the 2004 through 2006 captain year groups. LAF-JA captain year groups are based on the year an officer was promoted to captain in the JAG Corps or, if a prior-service officer, the captain year group an officer was placed into by the Air Force JA based upon service calculations.

Eligibility Exclusions

Some officers will not meet the RIF board, including the following:

• Officers with an approved date of separation on or before April 30, 2015, or who have an approved Temporary Early Retirement Authority retirement on or before May 1, 2015.

• Officers who because of a deployment have an approved voluntary separation pay or TERA separation date after April 30, 2015.

• Officers on a promotion list as of the board convening date.

• Officers with less than one year time-in-grade as of the board convening date.

To review the updated matrices or for information about other personnel issues, visit the myPers website.

Minister of interior visits Ramstein

Roger Lewentz, Rheinland-Pfalz minister of the interior, visits the Rhine Ordnance Barracks Medical Center construction site, adjacent to Ramstein Air Base, with Lt. Gen. Tom Jones, U.S. Air Forces in Europe and Air Forces Africa vice commander, and Brig. Gen. Patrick Mordente, 86th Airlift Wing commander, Sept. 2. Jones hosted Lewentz on his official visit to meet with senior U.S. Air Force leaders and learn about the strategic importance of the Air Force's mission in Europe. The State of Rheinland-Pfalz is home to Ramstein and Spangdahlem air bases, and once completed, the ROBMC will serve as the region's premier U.S. military medical center.

Cryogenics makes it easy to breathe

Airman 1st Class
Michael Stuart
86th Airlift Wing
Public Affairs

Breathing is one of the most basic, involuntary and often overlooked human actions. At higher altitudes, breathing can quickly become one of the most conscious thoughts as it becomes harder to do.

"A lot of people don't even know about cryogenics ... they don't know what goes into getting (our product) out there," said Senior Airman Jeffery Halda, 86th Logistics Readiness Squadron cryogenics technician.

The 86th Logistics Readiness Squadron cryogenics team helps ensure aircrew members can breathe easily at altitudes higher than 10,000 feet. On Ramstein, a cryogenics job is to receive, store, maintain and issue liquid oxygen and liquid nitrogen for aircrew members.

"My job is to keep planes flying," Halda said. "Without us, the mission wouldn't continue, because the aircrew members couldn't breathe."

Liquid oxygen can burn right through skin, because it is minus 297 degrees Fahrenheit, and liquid nitrogen is minus 321 degrees Fahrenheit. To ensure their safety, the cryogenics team ensures they wear their full body coats, aprons, gloves, face masks, goggles and ear protection.

"If you talk to most people who work on the flightline, they will tell you a common misconception about the amount of work that we do," Halda said.

The cryogenics team fills tanks full of liquid oxygen and liquid nitrogen and then transports them onto the flightline to ensure the pilots have enough to accomplish their mission.

Senior Airman Seth Bruning, 86th Logistics Readiness Squadron hydrants technician, said that in an average month, they fill about 5,000 gallons of liquid oxygen and 8,000 gallons of liquid nitrogen.

After filling the tanks, the cryo-technicians sample the chemicals inside of them then send them off to a lab for a more intensive examination. The liquid oxygen is then stored as a gas since it is eight times more condensed than the liquid form.

"We take a sample, let the pressure build up to about 15 to 19 pounds per square inch and turn it into gas," Bruning said. "Once it's in a gas state, we ship it to one of our aerial labs, and they run tests on the samples."

The Air Force standard for liquid oxygen is 99.5 percent purity; however, the cryogenics team consistently maintains a higher level.

Cryogenics guarantees aircrew members will have fresh, clean oxygen as they complete their mission. Without cryogenics, any flying mission would be nearly impossible.

Senior Airman Jeffery Halda, 86th Logistics Readiness Squadron hydrants technician, observes a liquid oxygen tank Sept. 3 on Ramstein.

Recipe of the week:

Meat strips with tomatoes and cheese

Servings: 4

INGREDIENTS:

- 500 grams tomatoes, peeled and quartered
- 1 bunch green onions, washed and cut in rings
- 500 grams pork, veal or turkey fillets
- 30 grams butter
- 1 clove garlic, pressed
- 2 tablespoons creme fraiche
- Salt and freshly ground white pepper, to taste
- 100 grams gouda cheese*, middle aged

DIRECTIONS:

- Plunge the tomatoes into boiling water for just a minute or two, then immediately put them into a bowl of very cold or ice water to loosen the skins. Peel the skins from the tomatoes and cut the tomatoes into quarters. Remove and discard the cores and set the tomatoes aside.
- Thoroughly wash the green onions, pat dry and slice into rings.
- Rinse the meat and pat dry with paper towels. Cut meat diagonally and on the grain, into strips.
- Heat the butter in a frying pan and brown the meat on all sides. Add in the onion rings and brown for about 2 minutes or until they start to become transparent. Stir in the tomato quarters and the pressed garlic. Stir everything together and cook for about 5 minutes. When heated through, stir in the creme fraiche and cook for an additional few minutes.
- Season with salt and white pepper. Grate the cheese, and sprinkle it over the entire dish. Cover the pan and continue cooking until the cheese melts.
- Serve with Spätzle or band noodles.

NOTE: If you can get it, use gouda cheese that has been seasoned with garden herbs. If you can't find it, you can add mixed herbs of your choice if you want. You can also substitute the gouda with another soft, herbed cheese, such as Schnittkäse mit Gartenkräutern.

Capt. Spanky can do as the Romans do

Hello all! I have to say, being stationed in Germany offers a variety of culture and beauty that many locations cannot. Not only does this location allow my humans and me to enjoy the wonders of Germany but also of other countries, such as Italy!

In just a short, two-hour flight, one can find themselves in the amazing city of Rome! Just thinking about the sights, the sounds and the food that I could get there just has my little nub wagging! There is just so much to do.

I could go to the Roman Colosseum, originally known as the Flavian Amphitheater. I could stand on the same grounds where the gladiators fought. I'm not much of a barker, but can you just imagine my voice being heard over a structure that could seat 50,000 people?

Or, maybe I could take my humans to see the Roman Pantheon. It's the most preserved building of ancient Rome. I don't know about you, but a building that has been standing for more than 1,800 years is quite impressive to me. It stands as one of the more stunning aspects of ancient Roman architecture. Also, did you know that it is a temple dedicated to all of the gods of early Roman culture?

Then, there are the Roman squares, or Piazzas. These squares are the access points to many of Rome's other attractions, and since there are quite a few, I can just see myself running and jumping from piazza to piazza (even though my human doesn't like me to run and jump). But how could I resist? I would be in areas that display more than 1,000 years of Roman history!

I must admit that I am glad to have this opportunity to have such a wonderful city with so much culture and history in my backyard. I must be sure to take advantage of this great chance I've been given and get as much traveling in as I can!

on-base accidents and within 72 hours for off-base accidents. This change is for minor traffic accidents only.

A minor traffic accident is described as: fender benders, non-disabling damages estimated to cost less than $10,000 and no injuries.

A major traffic accident is described as: any accidents with fatalities, personal injury, disabling damage (requiring towing), difficult to explain accidents or accidents involving possible fraud circumstances.

Many factors in an accident change the way it should be dealt with by the parties involved, and that is why the new traffic accident information pamphlet is critical to guide your actions in the aftermath of a traffic accident.

Though there are many factors to consider when being involved in a traffic accident, the most important key piece is to never leave the scene without communicating with the owner of damaged property or reporting the accident to law enforcement, whether the accident involves a moving vehicle, a parked vehicle, a pedestrian or someone's property. If you drive away, even if the accident is not your fault, you can be charged with fleeing the scene of an accident, which could have financial and/or legal consequences.

This new pamphlet provides all the information needed to assess a situation if involved in a traffic accident. The pamphlet explains everything, including what your responsibilities are, how you should act, emergency numbers, accident worksheet, etc. Upon registration of your vehicle, you will be given a copy of the pamphlet. We highly encourage you to keep a copy in your vehicle with your registration at all times.

If you have already registered your vehicle and would like a copy of the pamphlet, contact the 86th Security Forces Squadron Police Services section at 480-1215 or 06371-47-2050, or the 569th USFPS Police Services section at 489-6004 or 0631-536-6004.

Traffic accidents are unexpected and unpredictable, but this pamphlet arms you with the knowledge to navigate in the right direction.

How To Report A Traffic Accident:

• If you are involved in a traffic accident on Ramstein Air Base, you must report it to the 86th SFS Ramstein Law Enforcement Desk by calling 480-2050 or 06371-47-2050.

• If you are involved in an accident on any other installation in the KMC (i.e., Vogelweh, Daenner, Kleber, Panzer, Sembach, Landstuhl, Miesau or off-base), you must report the accident to the 569th USFPS Integrated Defense Operations Center, or IDOC, by calling 489-6060/7070 or 0631-536-6060/7070.

• Polizei can be reached at 110 or 112. Always call 112 for emergency situations.

Don't be a no-show

by the 86th Medical Group

Our goal at the 86th Medical Group is to meet the health care needs of you and your family by providing the best possible medical care.

In order to provide the appointments needed for enrolled patients and their families, we need your help in preventing no-shows.

Last minute cancellations or not showing up for a scheduled appointment have a negative impact on everyone's access to services and can adversely affect the readiness mission. So far this year, there were 3,076 missed appointments at the 86th MDG, valued at more than $215,320. This value not only represents lost productivity, but also significant wasted resources that could be better used elsewhere. We understand unforeseen circumstances may sometimes occur resulting in missed appointments, but when you "no-show" for an appointment, it can not only negatively affect your medical readiness, but also prevents your family or colleagues from getting a needed appointment, perhaps for an urgent issue.

To decrease the amount of no-shows, the 86th MDG appointment reminder system calls patients two days prior to the scheduled appointment. If you get this call and you no longer need the appointment, let us know so we can make that appointment available to someone else. Keep in mind this system uses the most current phone numbers listed in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System, so it is critical to update your local phone number in DEERS. Call 800-538-9552 to update your information.

You can cancel appointments by calling the 86th MDG central appointments line at 479-2273, or if you booked your appointment using www.tricareonline.com, you can cancel it online. In addition, if you are enrolled in MiCare, you can also take advantage of emailing your provider and his/her team directly.

To provide feedback, call Maj. Janelle Quinn, 86th MDG group practice manager, at 479-2687.

be fully certified to teach.

"I like teaching, and I like martial arts," said Senior Airman David Stout, 1st Air and Space Communications Operations Squadron. "I think this is a great volunteer opportunity for me, something that I can get really passionate about and really enjoy doing."

Though physical techniques are the first thing students are taught, the instructors will also teach verbal and psychological techniques.

"We firmly believe that physical self-defense is only a means for delivering the verbal... and the psychological self-defense," Gracie said. "We feel like you have to understand all three components."

The techniques are designed to not only neutralize a situation, but to also do it without escalating an incident and helping the students remain in or regain control. Physical techniques ranged from blocking strikes to disarming an assailant, in both standing and ground situations.

"I've only been practicing martial arts for the last three years or so," Stout said. "It's something that I found I really enjoy doing. It's a great way to gain confidence. That's not to say you should go around picking fights, but if you are ever put in a situation where you might be compromised, you can more than likely walk out of it. To be able to take that and give that same feeling to people is something I feel strongly about."

The classes are held on a weekly basis. Additionally, units or private organizations are able to request instructors to conduct training. Instructors will teach each class to the lowest knowledge base of the newest student. This allows anyone to join a class at any time, while also giving more proficient students a chance to become more skilled in a technique they already know.

The classes are free to any person in possession of a valid Department of Defense ID card who has access to the base where the instructors will be teaching the class.

For more information, contact Master Sgt. Mark Tilsher, KMC Gracie Defense Systems director, at kmc.gds@us.af.mil.

Fireworks displays are scheduled for tonight and the last day of Wurstmarkt, Sept. 22.

World's biggest wine festival opens today

by Petra Lessoing
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

The world's biggest wine festival, called the "Dürkheimer Wurstmarkt," starts today.

For the 598th time, Bad Dürkheim along the German Wine Street will host this traditional fest, enticing about 600,000 visitors from all over the world.

Almost 300 vendors and ride owners will set up shop on the almost 485-square-foot festival grounds next to the "Dürkheimer Fass," the world's largest wine barrel. This barrel houses a restaurant, and if it were used as a barrel, it could hold 1.7 million liters of wine.

The annual wine fest will be celebrated in two parts: from today through Tuesday, and from Sept. 19 to 22.

The "Wurstmarkt," or sausage fair, is almost 600 years old. It received its name from the fact that fest-goers ate enormous amounts of sausage during the event in the first part of the 19th century. However, the main attractions of the fest are its 36 little wine tents, called "Schubkärchler," or wheelbarrows, because vintners rolled wine barrels on wheelbarrows up to "Monte Sancti Michaeli," Michelsberg hill, to quench pilgrims' thirst in the 15th century.

Each year at the end of September on Michael's day, pilgrims visited the little chapel on top of the hill. On the way up, vendors sold their goods. Then, church dignitaries no longer accepted this kind of pilgrimage. Market activities were relocated to the bottom of Michelsberg, and the "sausage fair" was born.

In the year 1910, city officials decided to celebrate the fest earlier in September and no longer on Michaels' day because of better weather. In 1926, the Wurstmarkt got extended by a day, in 1951 by seven, and finally in 1965, the fest was extended by eight days. Since 1985, the fest has been nine days long.

The historical wine tents (Schubkärchler) will open at 10 a.m., and the rides open at noon each day. Rides include merry-go-rounds, auto scooters, a giant Ferris wheel, a roller coaster and fast rides, such as "Take Off," "Breakdance" and "Hot Shot." Two haunted mansions, "Horror Lazarett" and "Daemonium," will provide horror fun. There will be food and candy booths, fest tents with live bands and a wine village with wine tents.

The Wurstmarkt will begin at 5 p.m. today with a concert in front of the Kurhaus (official spa building). At 5:30 p.m., a parade with musicians, vintners and officials will lead from the Kurhaus to the festival grounds, where the Wurstmarkt officially opens at 6 p.m.

The event's first fireworks display, called "Six Days Left," will be lit by the current world champion of pyrotechnicians at 9 p.m. Tuesday, and the second one will close out the fest at 9 p.m. Sept. 22.

Trains run from Kaiserslautern to Bad Dürkheim about every 30 minutes until 6 p.m. After 6 p.m., trains run every hour. Passengers have to change trains in Neustadt.

Fest-goers can travel by train from Bad Dürkheim to Kaiserslautern and Landstuhl on additional trains at 10:05 p.m., 10:40 p.m., 11:08 p.m., 12:08 a.m., 12:38 a.m., 1:38 a.m. and 2:38 a.m.

For details on train times, visit www.vrn.de or www.der-takt.de, or get the train schedule at the Window to Rheinland-Pfalz counter in the Kaiserslautern Military Community Center.

Airmen pump up C-130 capabilities

by Airman Larissa Greatwood
86th Airlift Wing Public Affairs

On Aug. 12, the 37th Airlift Squadron conducted "Wet Wing" training, which enables C-130 airframes to have the capability to defuel with four engines running as opposed to two. Defueling is when an aircraft is sent to a location to refuel other aircraft.

Being in a central European country, Ramstein's ability to have this qualification will greaten the mission's impact as it is in closer vicinity to crucial areas. On a larger scale, the military will save money by using C-130 aircraft to transport fuel as opposed to larger aircraft used in the past.

"By using a single C-130J (Super Hercules) to take fuel to austere locations, the military is saving millions in the long run by reducing the need of two traditional C-130 (short) aircraft," said Master Sgt. Boris Brink, 37th Airlift Squadron aircraft loadmaster. "Not only are we saving money by using a C-130 aircraft to refuel, (but) being at Ramstein saves us money because we're closer to most deployed locations than aircraft based in the United States. With this process, we are able to transport fuel to fuel bladders in other locations where they can disperse the fuel to motor vehicles, helicopters and smaller aircraft."

Brink said the training to test this process at Ramstein proved a success and was used during a recent real-world mission.

"It's a new way for us to do business," said Maj. Dennis Hamilton, 37th Airlift squadron pilot. "The idea is that when we go to a (remote location), we really don't want to shut down two engines and get stuck out there. The training had all four engines running so we're able to get the fuel to the user and extend their reach and the military's reach."

The defueling concept is directed toward users in deployed locations as well as impromptu missions.

"We're getting fuel out to locations where they're taking small rotary wing aircraft deeper in the world without runways, and our Airmen need to be able to do their jobs," Hamilton said. "When we fly into places that are less developed, this capability makes (the mission) that much easier."

Using a four-engine defueling mechanism makes getting fuel to such places simpler and allows more room in the C-130.

"What we've done in the past is we've had full fuel bladders in the back of the aircraft which take up two pallet positions," Brink said. "With this new technique, we're able to carry about 33 percent more cargo and offload fuel at the same time."

The ability to be able to convert the number of engines has been done in other locations, but is now allowed at Ramstein. The approval process may have been difficult, but it was worth it.

"We were able to get a technical order changed to enable this to happen, which would be the equivalent to changing an (Air Force Instruction) for other jobs, so getting that changed was a big deal," Brink said.

With this new ability at Ramstein, military members can now complete the mission more efficiently.

Volunteers make history for 50th Ramstein Welfare Bazaar

The 50th Ramstein Welfare Bazaar is right around the corner, and almost 100 percent of the bazaar workforce are volunteers. Would you like to help? All the volunteer teams have a lot of fun, and there is something for everyone.

To volunteer, go to www.ramsteinbazaar.org and click on "Volunteer Today." You will be able to sign up for one or more four-hour volunteer shifts. Once you are on the website, you can choose from working hangar set-up, hospitality or finance. Descriptions for each time slot are detailed on the sign up pages.

Volunteers are needed from Sept. 11 through 22. If you are not available to work a four-hour shift, there are opportunities to make donations of prepared food items.

Do you have a group of seven or more people that want to volunteer together? Contact the staffing coordinator at staffing@ramsteinbazaar.org for assistance.

Everyone who signs up to volunteer will receive an invitation to red carpet shopping. This exclusive event takes place from 5 to 7 p.m. Wednesday. The bazaar grounds will open to the public beginning at 10 a.m. Thursday.

Proceeds from the bazaar are distributed to the KMC through the Ramstein Officers' Spouses Club Welfare Fund. Last year, over $255,000 went back into the community.

The Ramstein Welfare Bazaar is an 86th Force Support Squadron event that is produced by the Ramstein Officers' Spouses Club. The bazaar takes place Sept. 18 through 21 on the Ramstein flightline.

Make history with the 50th Ramstein Welfare Bazaar and volunteer today.

Suicide Prevention Month: risk, protective factors

by Capt. Rachel Wiley and Capt. Allison Valdovinos
86th Medical Group suicide prevention program managers

Although no one is immune to the adverse effects of prolonged, excessive stress, some service members are at greater risk for suicide than others. Young, unmarried males of lower rank and those experiencing legal, financial, relational or occupational problems may be more prone to suicidal thoughts or feelings. Other possible contributing factors include lack of advancement, a sense of a loss of honor and heavy drinking; approximately 90 percent of suicides are associated with mental health and substance abuse problems.

Suicide risk factors are psychological characteristics, behaviors or life experiences associated with an increase in the possibility that someone will become suicidal. The specific risk factors for suicide are generally grouped into three categories: adverse life circumstances, such as the loss of a job or relationship; medical and mental health problems; and cultural issues.

Life Circumstances
- Access to lethal means of self-harm
- Suicides within the family/community
- Career setbacks or disciplinary actions, loss of a job
- Loss of or conflict within a close relationship
- Financial problems
- Readjustment difficulties following deployment

Medical and Mental Health Problems
- History of abuse, family violence, or trauma
- Medical or mental health problems (depression, anxiety, etc.)
- Prior suicide attempt
- Impulsiveness, aggressiveness
- Alcohol and substance abuse (which can cause or exacerbate existing depression)
- Severe or prolonged stress
- Overwhelming grief from a loss (death of a loved one, divorce, disabling injury, etc.)

Cultural Issues
- Access to health care
- Beliefs that support suicide as a solution; negative attitudes toward getting help
- Limited support

Remember, risk factors do not mean a person will actually attempt suicide now or in the future. When risk factors are present, consider ways you can help that individual through social support or guiding them to appropriate resources.

Protective Factors
These factors are positive conditions, influences and resources that promote well-being and reduce the potential for suicide. They help provide support during times of stress. Some of the most common protective factors are:
- Strong social support from family, friends and co-workers
- Belief that your life has purpose and meaning
- Being optimistic about your future
- Feeling that you belong to a group
- Willingness to talk about problems and seek help
- Developing effective coping and problem-solving skills
- Engaging in regular physical activity
- Spiritual involvement
- Eating a healthy diet

When someone is considering suicide, even though you may wish you could talk them out of it, it may not be the best way to help. Avoid saying things like, "You have so much to live for," or "Think about how this will hurt your family." Instead, show concern and compassion by saying, "Things must really be difficult for you to be feeling that way." Let them know you are there to listen. Encourage them to share what they are feeling. Let them know that people sometimes feel like there is no answer, but that treatment can help them to feel better. Tell them you will support them to find help. Ask if they have a specific suicide plan. If they do, do not leave them alone, and take away any firearms, drugs or objects they could use to hurt themselves. Take them to the mental health clinic, or call 06371-46-2390, the emergency department at 06371-86-8160, the chaplain at 06371-47-2121, or the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 1-800-273-8255 for help.

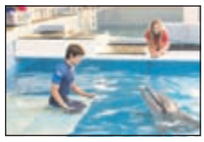
At The Movies

Dolphin Tale 2

"Dolphin Tale 2" will tell another true story inspired by the life of Winter but also involving a new baby dolphin named Hope who was rescued by the Clearwater Marine Aquarium in 2010.

Starring Morgan Freeman and Ashley Judd



The Hundred-Foot Journey

Displaced from their native India, the Kadam family settles in the quaint village of Saint-Antonin-Noble-Val in the south of France. Filled with charm, it is both picturesque and elegant — the ideal place to settle down and open an Indian restaurant, the Maison Mumbai. That is, until the chilly chef proprietress of Le Saule Pleureur, a Michelin starred, classical French restaurant run by Madame Mallory, gets wind of it. Her icy protests against the new Indian restaurant escalate to all out war between the two establishments. Mallory's enchanting sous chef, Marguerite, combines with Hassan Kadam's mysteriously delicious talent to weave magic between their two cultures and imbue Saint-Antonin with the flavors of life that even Mallory cannot ignore.

Starring Helen Mirren and Om Puri

It's Wine Festival Season in Germany!

It's impossible not to love Germany during wine festival season. Although wine fests can be found around the region nearly year round, the largest and most well known festivals happen in the early fall, starting this weekend!

story by contributing writer

If you're new to the area, these festivals are very family friendly and take place outdoors, either in a city center or on the rolling hillsides nearby. The events go all day and in the evening, so wear comfortable shoes, bring some friends, and be sure to take the train or have a designated driver.

Wine Festivals in the Pfalz

Are you looking for something interesting to do at weekends? Right on your doorstep in the Pfalz region you will find a number of Wein Fests (wine festivals) taking place every weekend!

These include Weinwanderungen (wine walks), where you pay one price to taste many wines from various stands situated along paths in the middle of vineyards. You will also find villages full of vintners that throw open the doors of their gardens, garages and courtyards to host wine tastings with food stands and lively bands.

Bad Dürkheim Wurstmarkt

The biggest wine festival in the world, the Wurstmarkt (sausage market), in the spa town of Bad Dürkheim, is the world's biggest wine festival with over 600,000 visitors each year and it takes place on the second and third weekend of September.

Pfälzer Party of the Year

The Wurstmarkt, or Bad Dürkheim Wine Festival as some people refer to it, is one of the largest, most traditional and entertaining festivals in Germany. It is over 570 years old, and still as young as ever - it is the festival of festivals - the main party event of the year in the Pfalz.

It takes place in the middle of the town, outside the famous giant Wine cask (Dürkheimer Riesenfass) - the largest wine barrel in the world, which also houses a restaurant. The festival is reminiscent of a carnival, with fairground rides and many food stalls being temporarily installed for the event.

Overflowing Wine

You can enjoy over 150 different wines only from the Bad Dürkheim region in over 50 different places throughout the fest - from the mellow Riesling to the finest sweet ice wine available in the many wine tents. Or visit one of the many traditional "Schubkärchler" - small traditional wine stands with scrubbed wooden tables worn smooth over the years. If you prefer to enjoy a fine wine in a more tranquil and intimate atmosphere, the Weindorf - the sophisticated wine village - is the place for you. Bad Dürkheim wine loses none of its flavour wherever you drink it. There is even a beer hall for those that prefer the grain to the grape!
